INTRODUCTION

I

WHEN, some two-and-a-half years ago, I began to choose the poems that make up this Oxford Book of Medieval Latin Verse, I confess that I was more than a little disturbed at the thought of writing an introduction to it. There was so little in English, or indeed in any other language, to help any reader who desired to study this literature, that I feared that I should either have to write something far too long for a book of this compass, or to be content with a jejune list of references whence some at least of the desired information might be excavated. But my apprehensions have fortunately proved groundless, and the year 1927 has seen the publication of two books which are a credit to British scholarship—Miss Helen Waddell's The Wandering Scholars (Constable) and Mr. F. J. E. Raby's History of Christian-Latin Poetry (Clarendon Press), and the student of the Latin secular and religious poetry respectively of the middle ages (and I hardly think that the two should or can be kept separate) will obtain what he wants from these works. They are widely different in style and in manner of composition: Miss Waddell's interests are primarily cultural, Mr. Raby's more purely literary: but between them they cover almost completely the ground represented by the selection I have here made. I confidently commend both to my readers.¹

¹ Among other books, the interest of Sir Alexander Croke's Essay on the origin, progress, and decline of rhyming Latin verse (Oxford, 1828) is now mainly antiquarian, but he was the first to

Latin was the language of the educated classes of Europe for a thousand years; but the spirit of poesy moves from one country to another. The beginnings are naturally in or near the centre of the declining Western Empire, and in spite of a few poems by St. Hilary of Poitiers (1) and the Abundantia peccatorum of St. Augustine, St. Ambrose is really the first medieval Latin poet, with his hymns for use in the Basilica at Milan (3-5), the form of his verse derived from Horace on the one hand and the hymns of Eastern Christianity on the other; almost his contemporary is Prudentius (7-9), the draw attention in this country to the existence of such a literature: Archbishop Trench's Sacred Latin poetry (London, 1849) contains some useful material, but is handicapped by his omission of poems which were doctrinally distasteful to him. On the other hand Polycarp Leyser's Historia poetarum et poematum medii aevi (Halle, 1721) is a book to be eagerly ordered when found in a second-hand bookseller's catalogue, as are any of Edelestand du Ménil, for they contain certain secular and popular poems not to be found elsewhere. Thomas Wright's Political songs of England and Latin poems commonly attributed to Walter Mapes (both Camden Society publications, 1839 and 1841) can fortunately still be obtained without much difficulty: his Anglo-Latin satirical poets of the twelfth century (Rolls Series, 1872) is a little less easy to get. The Carmina Burana, edited by Schmeller in 1847 (and reprinted at various later dates without change), can usually be found; they badly need re-editing, and I hope it is true that the task is in the competent hands of Dr. Alfons Hilka: the two best editions of the 'Cambridge Songs'—the more textually accurate by K. Strecker (Berlin, 1926) and the more elaborate and humane by K. Breul (Cambridge, 1915)—are still in print. So much for secular poems: for religious poetry, A. S. Walpole's Early Latin hymns (Cambridge, 1922) is indispensable, and then, above the collections of Daniel and Mone, the great Analecta Hymnica of Dreves and Blume, which Spaniard who (like his descendants to this day) is also a great Roman gentleman. For another two centuries poetry is still in the Empire: but after Venantius (16-17), the Italian who made his home in France, the Christian Muse migrates to England and Ireland, for the sky is dark in Western Europe. The Irish (20, 21, 26) introduce for the first time an elaborate rhyme-system, including the double or feminine rhyme.¹ Charlemagne brings back the 'insular' learning to France again (27-37 are the products of his age). Then there seems another pause, with an occasional spring in a Germanic (38, 46) or is not yet, I hope, at an end, and with it Julian's Dictionary of Hymnology, a masterpiece of learning and careful research. For full lists of published books and articles consult the lists at the end of Miss Waddell's and Mr. Raby's books: among other selections of medieval Latin of a more general kind (prose as well as poetry) I will dare to mention my own Anthology of medieval Latin (Macmillan, 1925) and three similar volumes published in the United States in the same year, by C. H. Beeson, C. U. Clark and J. B. Game, and K. P. Harrington: see a combined review in the excellent Speculum (January, 1926), the organ of the Medieval Academy of America. (There is also a useful selection of poetry, Mittelateinische Dichtung, by Carl Beck, in the Sammlung Götschen, Berlin, 1926, with which I would couple the late Professor J. S. Phillimore's Hundred best Latin hymns, Glasgow, 1926. Two cheap but valuable little books.)

All of Wilhelm Meyer's works are very important, and reference should be constantly made to the great Geschichte der Lateinischen Literatur des Mittelalters of Max Manitius (Munich, 1911 and 1923), which still covers only the first half of the period. The more I consult this book, the more I am impressed by its learning and documentation, though I still think that the writer scarcely pays sufficient attention to work done outside his own country.

INTRODUCTION

Italian country (40, 47), until we come within sight of the revival in the early twelfth century.¹ From that time onward, poetry is less local: there is more of it, and better, I think, in France than elsewhere: but both the higher ecclesiastics and wandering clerks moved freely between Northern France and England, and the provenance of some poems of that age is often difficult to decide: Peter Abaelard (55-57) is purely French, Hilarius (58) is shared by the two countries; I now believe the Rosy Sequence (62) to be English, as is Geoffrey de Vinsauf (68), Giraldus de Barri (71), and in the next century the two Archbishops of Canterbury, Stephen Langton (74) and John Pecham (93, 94). With Adam of St. Victor (60) and Philip de Grèves (75) the Latin poetry of France reaches its summit: the Muse then passes to Italy for a brief space, to St. Thomas Aquinas (78-80), Thomas of Celano (82), and Jacopone da Todi (83), and that is the end of the very best. The wandering scholars had become a scandal to society and had been suppressed: in religious poetry the form prescribed by the great masters remained, but the touch of inspiration was gone; thence to the close of the middle ages we find competent versification rather than the spontaneity of the poet. If 105 be English in whole or in part, as I think it may, it seems to me to stand high among the works of its time, and it reminds me strangely of Christina Rossetti's In the bleak mid-winter, which I have always placed among the most affecting of Christmas meditations.²

There is little that I can say, unfortunately, within the compass of an introduction, about the secular Latin poems of the middle ages. It must always be remembered that those which remain to us have survived with difficulty, being under a cloud from the first: it is the purest good fortune that we still have 44, 61, 63, and not only are the survivors a very small proportion of the mass that must once have existed, but even those we do possess are anonymous (and so difficult to place and date), because their authors did not care to be permanently associated with poems of passion or other worldly compositions. I think it possible that Peter Abaelard may have written one or two of the Carmina Burana,¹ but I cannot prove it: for the identification of other poets, the Archipoeta, the Primas of Cologne and the Primas of Orleans I must refer again to Miss Waddell's Wandering Scholars, recommending also the article by J. H. Hanford, The Progenitors of Goliath, in the first number of Speculum to modern Anglican congregations by being included in the English Hymnal (no. 25).

¹ See a passage in the first of his Letters, also called the 'Historia calamitatum suarum', concerning the time when he was settled in Fulbert's house as tutor, and had seriously begun the task of making Heloïse his mistress:—Ita negligentem et tepidum lectio tunc habebat ut jam nihil ex ingenio, sed ex usu cuncta proferrem, nec jam nisi recitator pristinorum essem inventorum; et si qua invenire liceret, carmina essent amatoria, non philosophiae secreta. Quorum etiam carminum pleraque adhuc in multis, sicut et ipse nosti, frequentantur et decantantur regionibus, ab his maxime quos vita similis oblectat. Now were these songs in French or Latin? There was a strange theory in eighteenth-century France that this passage might even indicate Abaelard as

It remains to say a word or two of the choice of pieces in this volume, and their presentation. First, I have interpreted the word 'medieval' strictly, and stop short before the great Latin poets of the Renaissance. Second, I have not tried to find the best poems, but the most characteristic, and my nationality has made me include more English pieces than would have been chosen by an anthologist of another country. In the third place, I the author of the 'Roman de la Rose'; but considering the language of the correspondence and the generally learned character of the relations between Abaelard and his love, even in their youth, it seems more probable that they were in Latin. We know Abaelard as a master—perhaps the greatest master in the middle ages—of both metre and rhyme, as is attested by the hymn-book which he wrote for the Paraclete and by his Planctus (55 and 56 are specimens of each) and is it not possible that some of these songs may have come down to us among the Carmina Burana (for the dates fit admirably) in which there is certainly a French as well as a German element, and the highest metrical skill is displayed?

have wished to hold the balance between religious and secular poetry, but I beg my readers to remember the enormously larger field of the former: there are a thousand hymns from which to choose, for ten secular poems.

The notes endeavour to give the barest minimum of information about the authors, if known, or date and provenance of anonymous poems, which will enable them to be read with some idea of the time and place of their composition, and the minimum of comment which will allow a reader with an average knowledge of Latin to understand them, especially where difficulties are found by reason of departures from classical standards. Some will still be found hard—I may instance the Altus Prosator (20), where I think that there is no alternative between my modest comment and an attempt at a translation. I have given references in a good many cases to easily accessible English translations, especially when they are to be found in the *English Hymnal*¹ or Hymns Ancient and Modern (penultimate edition), as one or other of these is to be found in most cultivated English households.

¹ A book of which our Church has every right to be proud. Here are translations of course, but at least translations of the original texts. I must confess to a feeling of deep depression when I see the form which some of the oldest and best hymns have assumed in the modern Roman breviary—out of many examples I give but two, Ad regias agni dapes (= 11) and Caelestis urbs Jerusalem (= 22), the products of an age of declining taste. Now that a true scholar sits in the chair of St. Peter, might we not hope for a hymnal reform, comparable to that which Leo XIII made in Church music? A return to originals in the breviary and the restoration of ll. 18-21 of 46, the Easter sequence in the modern Roman missal?

To almost all the pieces I have added a metrical note, using language which assumes a knowledge of the ordinary technical terms used in Latin metre and prosody. The metres of many of these poems are unfamiliar, but are really fairly simple, the subject having been unduly complicated by foreign scholars who have not had the metrical training given to classical students in this country. But a handbook of medieval Latin prosody and metre is much to be desired.

Finally, I have not attempted any orthographical accuracy. I see no other object in such an attempt than to ascertain and print the spelling employed by the author of each poem: in a selection extending over more than eleven hundred years, the variations would be so great as to destroy the unity of the book, and the reproduction of unfamiliar and sometimes uncouth forms would be out of place in such an anthology as this. I have accordingly adopted a standard spelling of an unpretentious and (I hope) comfortable type.¹

In the index of first lines it will be seen that some entries are in italics. These are not first lines in the present selection, but lines which begin hymns, or other excerpts, taken from these poems, so well known that they have attained an existence of their own. Meum est propositum is familiar to many who would not recognize Aestuans intrinsecus (66), and I have for a similar reason, if illogically, included in italics Jesu dulcis memoria (62).

 morte carnis quam gerebat mortem vicit omnium. 40
 tum Deum clamore magno patrem pendens invocat :
 mors secuta membra Christi laxat, stricta vincula ;
 vela templi scissa pandunt, nox obscurat saeculum, excitantur de sepulcris dudum clausa corpora.
 adfuit Joseph beatus ; corpus myrrha perlitum, 45 linteo rudi ligatum cum dolore condidit.
 milites servare corpus Annas princeps praecipit, ut videret si probaret Christus quod spoponderat ;
 angelum Dei tremantes veste amictum candida, qui candore claritatis vellus vicit sericum, 50 demovet saxum sepulcro surgens Christus integer :
 haec videt Judaea, mendax haec negat cum viderit.

 spiritum Dei, perfectae Trinitatis vinculum. 60 praecipit totum per orbem baptizare credulos, nomen patris invocantes, confitentes filium, (mystica fide revelat) unctos sancto spiritu, fonte tinctos, innovatos, filios factos Dei.

Hymn to Christ

ASOLIS ortus cardine
ad usque terrae limitem Christum canamus principem natum Maria virgine.

Beatus auctor saeculi 5 servile corpus induit, ut carne carnem liberans
non perderet quos condidit.

Clausae puellae viscera caelestis intrat gratia : 10 venter puellae bajulat secreta quae non noverat.

Domus pudici pectoris templum repente fit Dei :
intacta nesciens virum 15
verbo creavit filium.

SEDULIUS

Enixa est puerpera
quem Gabriel praedixerat quem matris alvo gestiens clausus Johannes senserat. 20

Faeno jacere pertulit, praesepe non abhorruit, parvoque lacte pastus est per quem nec ales esurit.

Gaudet chorus caelestium 25 et angeli canunt Deum palamque fit pastoribus pastor, creator, omnium.

Hostis Herodes impie, Christum venire quid times? 30 non eripit mortalia
qui regna dat caelestia.

Ibant magi qua venerant stellam sequentes praeviam :
lumen requirunt lumine : 35
Deum fatentur munere.

Katerva matrum personat collisa deflens pignora, quorum tyrannus milia Christo sacravit victimam. 40

Lavacra puri gurgitis caelestis agnus attigit :
peccata qui mundi tulit nos ablundo sustulit.

SEDULIUS

Miraculis dedit fidem habere se Deum patrem, infirmis sanans corpora et suscitans cadavera. 45

Novum genus potentiae !
aquae rubescunt hydriae vinumque jussa fundere mutavit unda originem. 50

Orat salutem servulo
nixus genu centurio, credentis ardor plurimus extinxit ignes febrium. 55

Petrus per undas ambulat Christi levatus dextera :
natura quam negaverat
fides paravit semitam. 60

Quarta die jam foetidus vitam recepit Lazarus, mortisque liber vinculis factus superstes est sibi.

Rivos cruoris torridi contacta vestis obstruit, fletu rigante supplicis arent fluenta sanguinis. 65

Solutus omni corpore
jussus repente surgere
suis vicissim gressibus aeger vehebat lectulum. 70

SEDULIUS

Tunc ille Judas carnifex ausus magistrum tradere pacem ferebat osculo 75 quam non habebat pectore.

Verax datur fallacibus, pium flagellat impius,
crucique fixus innocens conjunctus est latronibus. 80

Xeromyrrham post sabbatum quaedam ferebant compares, quas allocutus angelus
vivum sepulcro non tegi.

Ymnis, venite, dulcibus 85
omnes canamus subditum Christi triumpho tartarum, qui nos redemit venditus.

Zelum draconis invidi et os leonis pessimi 90 calcavit unicus Dei sesequae caelis reddidit.

VEXILLA regis prodeunt, fulget crucis mysterium quo carne carnis conditor suspensus est patibulo.

Confixa clavis viscera, tendens manus, vestigia, redemptionis gratia
hic immolata est hostia. 5

Quo vulneratus insuper mucrone diro lanceae
ut nos lavaret crimine, manavit unda et sanguine. 10

Impleta sunt quae concinit David fideli carmine dicendo nationibus, regnavit a ligno Deus. 15

Arbor decora et fulgida, ornata regis purpura,

VENANTIUS FORTUNATUS

Fundis aroma cortice,

Salve ara, salve victima,

17. Hymn to the Holy Cross (2)

PANGE, lingua, gloriosi proelium certaminis, et super crucis tropaeo dic triumphum nobilem, qualiter redemptor orbis immolatus vicerit.

De parentis protoplasti fraude factor condolens quando pomi noxialis morte morsu corrui, ipse lignum tunc notavit damna ligni ut solveret. 5

Hoc opus nostrae salutis ordo depoposcerat, multiformis perditoris arte ut artem falleret, et medelam ferret inde hostis unde laeserat.

Quando venit ergo sacri plenitudo temporis, missus est ab arce patris natus, orbis conditor, atque ventre virginali carnefactus prodiit. 10

Vagit infans inter arta conditus praesaepia;
membra pannis involuta virgo mater adligat, et pedes manusque, crura stricta pingit fascia. 15

Lustra sex qui jam peracta tempus implens corporis, se volente, natus ad hoc, passioni deditus, agnus in crucis levatur immolandus stipite.

VENANTIUS FORTUNATUS

Hic acetum, fel, arundo, sputa, clāvi ; lancea mite corpus perforatur ; sanguis, unda profluit, 20 terra, pontus, astra, mundus quo lavantur flumine.

Crux fidelis, inter omnes arbor una nobilis, nulla talem silva profert flore, fronde, germine, dulce lignum dulce clavo dulce pondus sustinens,

Flecte ramos, arbor alta, tensa laxa viscera ; 25 et rigor lentescat ille quem dedit nativitas, ut superni membra regis mite tendas stipite.

Sola digna tu fuisti ferre pretium saeculi

30. The Battle of Fontenoy

AURORA cum primo mane tetram noctem dividet, sabbatum non illud fuit, sed Saturni dolium, de fraterna rupta pace gaudet daemon impius.

Bella clamat, hinc et inde pugna gravis oritur, frater fratri mortem parat, nepoti avunculus; 5 filius nec patri suo exhibet quod meruit.

Caedes nulla peior fuit campo nec in Marcio; fracta est lex christianorum sanguinis proluvio, unde manus inferorum, gaudet gula Cerberi.

Dextera praepotens Dei protexit Hlotharium, 10 victor ille manu sua pugnavitque fortiter:
ceteri si sic pugnassent, mox foret concordia.

Ecce olim velut Judas salvatorem tradidit, sic te, rex, tuique duces tradiderunt gladio:
esto cautus, ne frauderis agnus lupo praevio. 15

Fontaneto fontem dicunt, villam quoque rustici, ubi strages et ruina Francorum de sanguine:
horrent campi, horrent silvae, horrent ipsi paludes.

Gramen illud ros et imber nec humectat pluvia, in quo fortes ceciderunt, proelio doctissimi, 20
pater, mater, soror, frater, quos amici fleverant.

Hoc autem scelus peractum, quod descripsi rithmice, Angelbertus ego vidi pugnansque cum aliis, solus de multis remansi prima frontis acie.

Ima vallis retrospexi, verticemque jugeri, 25
ubi suos inimicos rex fortis Hlotharius expugnabat fugientes usque forum rivuli.

Karoli de parte vero, Hludovici pariter albent campi vestimentis mortuorum lineis, velut solent in autumno albescere avibus. 30

Laude pugna non est digna, nec canatur melode ; oriens, meridianus, occidens et aquilo plangent illos qui fuerunt illic casu mortui.

Maledicta dies illa, nec in anni circulo numeretur, sed radatur ab omni memoria, 35 jubar solis illi desit, aurora crepusculo,

Noxque illa, nox amara, noxque dura nimium,
in qua fortes ceciderunt, proelio doctissimi,
pater, mater, soror, frater, quos amici fleverant.

O luctum atque lamentum ! nudati sunt mortui, 40 horum carnes vultur, corvus, lupus vorant acriter :
horrent, carent sepulturis, vanum jacet cadaver.

Ploratum et ululatum nec describo amplius :
unusquisque quantum potest restringatque lacrimas, pro illorum animabus deprecemur dominum. 45

 gemma decens, rosa nata recens, perfecta decore, mella cavis inclusa favis imitata sapore omnimodos tuus almus odos praecellit odores ; 5 exsuperat, quos ver reserat, tua gratia flores.
 corporeus te, casta, Deus conceptus inundat, exorients, passus, moriens nos crimine mundat.
 ut miseros trahat ad superos, venit altus ad ima ; eripitur, dum mors moritur, plasmatio prima. 10 eximium fuit hoc nimium tibi, sancta virago, virgineum quod per gremium patris exit imago.
 amplexus solet hic sexus sentire pudendos, ut paribus de seminibus queat edere flendos, tu vero praegnans utero servansque pudorem 15 producis dominum lucis vitaeque datorem.
 luciferi mater pueri, te mundus adorat, te precibus, te carminibus devotus adorat.
 post dominum tu spes hominum, quos conscia mordet mens sceleris, quae per veneris contagia sordet. 20 supplicium post judicium removeto gehennae, Elisios concede pios habitare perenne.

49. The Paragon of Maidens

‘SISTE, puella, gradum per amoenum postulo Padum et per aquas alias tam cito ne salias.
 siste, puella, precor per terram, quaeso, per aequor ;
 si loqueris soli, nil patiere doli.
 vestitus, cultus, pulcher super omnia vultus 15 te generis clari comprobat ore pari.
 ex stellis frontis pares germana Phetontis, Juno tibi cedit, de Jove quando redit.
 dic, dic prudentes qui te genuere parentes et generis ritum dic patriaeque situm.’ 20 Non stupefacta parum reputans nimis istud amarum sic timet ipsa loqui sicut ab igne coqui.
 sprexit, vitavit, caput inclinando negavit, vix vocem rupit quam retinere cupit.
 ‘ Si de prole voles, decorat me regia proles ; 25 nobilis est mater, nobilis ipse pater.
 si proavos quaeris, dis vim fecisse videris, sanguine de quorum me sapit omne forum.
 ne super hoc erra, genuit me Troïca terra, terra dicata deo nota parente meo. 30 sed fugiens quendam cupientem figere mendam hunc circa fluvium floris amo studium’ . . .
 ‘ Lucifer ut stellis, sic es praelata puellis ;
 in praelativis est sua forma nivis. 260 constat et est clarum : superas genus omne rosarum ; sit judex aequus, tu geris omne decus.
 dum flavos humeris crines sparsisse videris et pro velle jacis, me sine mente facis.

cerni quando sinis frontem religamine crinis, 265
 haec etiam crebras luce fugat tenebras.
 sunt oculi digni gemini ceu lumina signi;
 nulla supercilio pars datur in vicio.
 dona referre genae nostrae nequit usus avenae;
 lingua nequit vatum scribat ut omne datum. 270 ad solis morem facies tua nacta colorem;
 hanc quotiens videam, cogit ut astupeam.
 cum species oris rosei datur esse coloris, ni datur os ori, tunc datur esse mori, cum gula candescat super hancque monile rubescat, 275 haec ego dum video, dulciter invideo.'

Phyllis and Flora

ANNI parte florida, caelo puriore, picto terrae gremio vario colore, dum fugaret sidera nuntius Aurorae, liquit somnus oculos Phyllidis et Florae.

Placuit virginibus ire spatiatum, 5 nam soporem rejicit pectus sauciatum ; aequis ergo gressibus exeunt in pratum, ut et locus faciat ludum esse gratum.

Eunt ambae virgines et ambae reginae, Phyllis coma libera, Flora compto crine ; 10 non sunt formae virginum, sed formae divinae, et respondent facies luci matutinae.

Nec stirpe nec facie nec ornatu viles, et annos et animos habent juveniles, sed sunt pares impares et pares hostiles, 15 nam huic placet clericus, illi placet miles.

Non est differentia corporis aut oris, omnia similia sunt intus et foris ;
 sunt ejusdem habitus et ejusdem moris :
 sola differentia modus est amoris. 20

Susurrabat modice ventus tempestivus, locus erat gramine viridi festivus, et in ipso gramine defluebat rivus vivus atque garrulo murmure festivus.

Ut puellis noceat calor solis minus, 25 fuit juxta rivulum spatiosa pinus, venustata foliis, late pandens sinus, nec intrare poterat calor peregrinus.

Consedere virgines, herba sedem dedit ;
 Phyllis prope rivulum, Flora longe sedit ; 30 et dum sedit utraque, et in sese redit, amor corda vulnerat et utramque laedit.

Amor est interius latens et occultus, et corde certissimos elicit singultus ;
 pallor genas inficit, alterantur vultus, 35 sed in verecundia furor est sepultus.

Phyllis in suspirio Floram deprehendit ;
 istam de consimili Flora reprehendit ;
 altera sic alteri mutuo rependit, tandem morbum detegit et vulnus ostendit. 40

Ille sermo mutuus multum habet morae, et est quaedam series tota de amore ;
amor est in animis, amor est in ore ;
tandem Phyllis incipit, et arridet Florae.

‘ Miles ’, inquit, ‘ inclite, mea cura, Paris, 45 ubi modo militas ? ubi nunc moraris ?
o vita militiae, vita singularis, sola digna gaudiis Dionaei laris ! ’

Dum puella militem recolit amicum, Flora ridens oculos jacet in obliquum, 50 et in risu loquitur verbum inimicum : ‘ Amas et quem poteras dicere mendicum.

sed quid, Aristoteles, facis, mea cura, res creata pulchrior omni creatura, quem beavit omnibus gratiis natura ? 55
o sola felicia clericorum jura ! ’

Floram Phyllis arguit de sermone duro, et sermone loquitur Floram commoturo, nam, ‘ Ecce virguncula ’ inquit ‘ corde puro, cujus pectus nobile servit Epicuro ! 60

Surge ’ inquit ‘ misera de furore foedo, solum esse clericum Epicurum credo :
nihil elegantiae clerico concedo, cujus implent latera moles et pinguedo.

A castris Cupidinis cor habet remotum, 65 qui somnum desiderat et cibum et potum.
o puella nobilis, omnibus est notum quam sit longe militis ab hoc voto votum.

ANONYMOUS

Solis necessariis miles est contentus, somno, cibo, potui non vivit intentus ; 70 amor illi prohibet ne sit somnolentus ;
 potus, cibus militis—amor et juvenus !

Quis amicos copulet nostros loro pari ?
 lex, natura prohibet illos copulari :
 meus novit ludere, tuus epulari ; 75 meo semper proprium dare, tuo dari.'

Haurit Flora sanguinem vultu verecundo et apparet pulchrior in risu jocundo ; tandem in eloquio reserat facundo
 corde quae conceperat artibus fecundo. 80

'Satis plus quam deceat, Phyllis, es astuta, nimis es eloquio velox et acuta, sed non efficaciter verum prosecuta dicis quod praevaleat lilio cicuta.

Dixisti de clerico quod indulget sibi, 85 servum somni nominas et potus et cibi :
 sic solet ab invido probitas describi ;
 ecce parum patere, respondebo tibi.

Tot et tanta, fateor, sunt amici mei, quod nunquam incogitat alienae rei ; 90 cellae mellis, olei, Cereris, Lyaei, aurum, gemmae, pocula famulantur ei.

In tam dulci copia vitae clericalis quod non potest aliqua pingi voce talis, volat et duplicibus amor plaudit alis, 95 amor indeficiens, amor immortalis.

Sentit tela Veneris et amoris ictus, non est tamen clericus macer aut afflictus, quippe nulla copiae parte derelictus, cui respondet animus dominae non fictus. 100

Macer est et pallidus tuus praelectus, pauper, et vix pallio sine pelle tectus ;
 non sunt artus validi nec robustum pectus, nam cum causa deficit, deest et effectus.

Turpis est pauperies imminens amanti ; 105 quid praestare poterit miles postulanti ?
 sed dat multa clericus et ex abundanti, tantae sunt divitiae redditusque tanti.'

Florae Phyllis objicit : 'Multum es perita in utroque studio, in utraque vita : 110 satis probabiliter es pulchre mentita, sed haec altercatio non quiescet ita.

orbem cum laetificat hora lucis festae, tunc apparet clericus satis inhoneste in tonsura capitis et in atra veste, 115 portans testimonium voluntatis maestae.

Non est adhuc fatuus aut omnino caecus cui non appareat militare decus :
 tuus est in otio, quasi brutum pecus ;
 meum tegit galea, meum portat equus. 120

Meus armis dissipat inimicas aedes, et si forte praelium solus init pedes dum tenet bucephalum suus Ganymedes, ille me commemorat inter ipsas caedes.

Redit fuis hostibus et pugna confecta, 125 et me saepe respicit galea rejecta ; ex his et ex aliis ratione recta est vita militiae mihi praelecta.'

Movit iram Phyllidis et pectus anhelum, et remittit multiplex illi Flora telum : 130
 ' Frustra ' inquit ' loqueris, os ponens in caelum, et per acum niteris trahere camelum.

Mel pro felle deseris et pro falso verum, approbans militiam, reprobando clerum.
 facit amor militem strenuum aut ferum ? 135 non, immo pauperies et defectus rerum.

Multis est calamitas militis attrita ;
 sors illius dura est et in arcto sita, cujus est in pendulo dubioque vita, ut habere valeat vitae requisita. 140

Pulchra Phyllis, utinam sapienter ames, nec veris sententiis amplius reclames :
 tuum domat militem sitis atque fames, quibus mortis petitur et inferni trames.

Non dicas opprobrium si cognoscas morem, 145 vestem nigram clerici, comam breviorē ;
 habet ista clericus ad summum honorem, ut sese significet omnibus majorem.

Universa clerico constat esse prona, et signum imperii portat in corona : 150 imperat militibus et largitur dona ;
 famulante major est imperans persona.

Otiosum clericum semper esse juras ;
 viles spernit operas, fateor, et duras :
 sed cum ejus animus evolat ad curas, 155 caeli vias dividit et rerum naturas.

Meus est in purpura, tuus in lorica, tuus est in praelio, meus in lectica ;
 ubi gesta principum relegit antiqua, scribit, quaerit, cogitat totum de amica. 160

Quid Dione valeat et amoris deus primo novit clericus et instruxit meus ; factus est per clericum miles Cythereus :
 illis et his modis est tuus sermo reus.'

Liquit Flora pariter vocem et certamen, 165 et sibi Cupidinis exigit examen ; Phyllis primum obstrepit, acquiescit tamen, et probato iudice redeunt per gramen.

Totum in Cupidine est certamen situm ;
 suum dicunt iudicem verum et peritum, 170 quia juris noverit utriusque ritum :
 jamjam sese praeparant ut eant auditum.

Pari forma virgines et pari colore, pari voto militant et pari pudore, Phyllis veste candida, Flora bicolore ; 175
 mulus vector Phyllidis erat, equus Florae.

Mulus quidem Phyllidis mulus erat unus quem creavit, aluit, domuit Neptunus ;
 hunc post apri rabiem, post Adonis funus, misit in solatium Cythereae munus. 180

Pulchrae matri Phyllidis et probae reginae illum tandem praebuit Venus Hiberinae eo quod indulserat operae divinae ;
ecce Phyllis possidet datum laeto fine.

Congruebat nimium virginis personae ; 185 pulcher erat, habilis, et staturae bonae, qualem esse decuit quem a regione tam longinqua miserat Nereus Dionae.

Qui de superpositis vel de freno quaerunt, quod totum argenteum dentes mûli terunt, 190 sciant quod haec omnia talia fuerunt qualia Neptunium munus decuerunt.

Non decore caruit illa Phyllis hora, sed satis apparuit dives et decora :
et non minus habuit utriusque Flora, 195 nam equi praedivitis freno domat ora.

Equus ille domitus Pegaseis loris satis pulchritudinis habet et decoris, pictus artificio varii coloris, nam mixtus nigredini candor est oloris. 200

Loro fuit habilis aetatis primaevae, et respexit paululum timide, non saeve ;
cervix fuit ardua, coma sparsa leve ;
auris parva, prominens pectus, caput breve.

Dorso pando jacuit virgini sessurae 205 spina, quae non senserat aliquid pressurae ;
pede cavo, tibia recta, longo crure, totus fuit sonipes studium naturae.

ANONYMOUS

Equo superposita congruebat sella, ebur enim medium clausit auri cella ; 210 et cum essent quatuor sellae capitella, venustavit singulum gemma velut stella.

Multa de praeteritis rebus et ignotis erant mirabilibus ibi sculpta notis, nuptiae Mercurii superis admotis, 215 foedus matrimonii, plenitudo dotis.

Nullus ibi locus est vacuus aut planus ;
 habet plus quàm capiat animus humanus :
 solus illam sculpserat aurifex Vulcanus ;
 vix haec suas credidit condidisse manus. 220

Praetermisso clipeo Mulciber Achillis fabricavit phaleras, et indulsit illis ; ferraturam pedibus et frenum maxillis et habenas addidit de sponsae capillis.

Sellam textit purpura subinsuta bysso, 225
 quam Minerva, reliquo studio dimisso, acantho texuerat et flore narcisso, et per partes margine fimbria inciso.

Equitabant pariter ambae domicellae ;
 vultus verecundi sunt, et genae tenellae : 230 sic erumpunt lilia, sic rosae novellæ, sic decurrunt pariter duae caeli stellae.

Ad Amoris destinant ire paradisum ; dulcis ira commovet utriusque visum ;
 paris pulchritudinis decus est illisum ; 235
 fert Phyllis accipitrem manu, Flora nisum.

ANONYMOUS

Parvo tractu temporis nemus est inventum.
ad ingressum nemoris murmurat fluentum ;
ventus inde redolet myrrham et pigmentum ;
audiuntur tympana citharaeque centum. 240

Quicquid potest hominis comprehendere mente, totum ibi virgines audiunt repente ;
vocum differentiae sunt illic inventae, sonat diatessaron, sonat diapente.

Tympanum, psalterium, lyra symphonia 245 sonat, et mirabili plaudit harmonia ; sonant ibi phialae voce valde pia, et buxus multiplici cantum edit via.

Sonant omnes volucrum linguae voce plena, vox auditur merulae dulcis et amena ; 250 corydalus garrulus, turtur, philomena quae non cessat conqueri de transacta poena.

Instrumento musico, vocibus canoris, tum diversi specie contemplata floris, tum odoris gratia redundante foris, 255 conjectatur teneri thalamus Amoris.

Virgines introeunt modico timore, et eundo propius crescunt in amore ;
sonant quaeque volucrum proprio rumore, accenduntur animi vario clamore. 260

Immortalis fieret ibi manens homo ; arbor ibi quaelibet suo gaudet pomo,
viae myrrha, cinnamo fragrant et amomo ;
conjectari poterat dominus ex domo.

ANONYMOUS

Vident choros juvenum et domicellarum, 265 singulorum corpora, corpora stellarum; capiuntur subito corda puellarum in tanto miraculo rerum novellarum.

Sistunt equos pariter et descendunt, paene oblitae propositi sono cantilenae; 270 sed auditur iterum cantus philomenae, et statim virgineae recalescunt venae.

Circa silvae medium locus est occultus, ubi viget maxime suus deo cultus;
fauni, nymphae, satyri, comitatus multus, 275 tympanizant, concinunt ante dei vultus.

Portant thyma manibus et coronas florum;
Bacchus nymphas instruit et choros faunorum;
servant pedum ordines et instrumentorum, sed Silenus titubat et salit in chorum. 280

Omnes urget senior asino pervectus et in risu copiam solvit dei pectus; clamat 'io!', remanet sonus imperfectus viam vocis impedit vinum et senectus.

Inter haec aspicitur Cythereae natus: 285 vultus est sidereus, vertex est pennatus, arcum laeva possidet et sagittas latus;
satis potest conjici potens et elatus.

Sceptro puer nititur floribus perplexo, stillat odor nectaris de capillo pexo; 290 tres assistunt gratiae digito connexo, et amoris calicem tenent genu flexo.

Appropinquant virgines et adorant tutae

Causam viae postulat ; aperitur causa, et laudatur utraque tantum pondus ausa :
ad utramque loquitur : ‘ modo parum pausa, donec res iudicio reseretur clausa ’. 300

Deus erat ; virgines norunt deum esse :
retractari singula non fuit necesse ;
equos suos deserunt et quiescunt fessae :
Amor suis imperat, judicent expresse.

Amor habet iudices, Amor habet jura, 305 sunt Amoris iudices Usus et Natura ; istis tota data est curiae censura, quoniam praeterita sciunt et futura.

Eunt, et justitiae ventilant vigorem, ventilant, et retrahunt curiae rigorem 310 secundum scientiam et secundum morem :
ad amorem clericum dicunt aptiorem.

Comprobavit curia ditionem juris, et teneri voluit etiam futuris :
parum ergo praecavent rebus nocituris, 315

The Better Land

HORA novissima, tempora pessima sunt, vigilemus.
 ecce minaciter imminet arbiter ille supremus :
 imminet, imminet, ut mala terminet, aequa coronet, recta remuneret, anxia liberet, aethera donet, auferat aspera duraque pondera mentis onustae, 5 sobria muniat, improba puniat, utraque juste.
 ille piissimus, ille gravissimus ecce venit rex :
 surgat homo reus, instat homo Deus, a patre judex.
 surgite, currite simplice tramite, quique potestis ;
 rex venit ocus, ipseque conscius ipseque testis. . . . 10 Curre, vir optime, lubrica reprime, praefer honesta ; fletibus angere, flendo merebere caelica festa.
 luce replebere jam sine vespere, jam sine luna ;
 lux nova, lux ea, lux erit aurea, lux erit una.
 cum sapientia sive potentia patria tradet 105 regna patri sua, tunc ad eum tua semita vadet :
 tunc nova gloria pectora sobria clarificabit, solvet enigmata veraque sabbata continuabit.
 liber ab hostibus et dominantibus ibit Hebraeus ;
 liber habebitur, et celebrabitur hinc jubilaus. 110 patria luminis, inscia turbinis, inscia litis cive replebitur, amplificabitur, Israelitis :
 patria splendida terraque florida, libera spinis, danda fidelibus est ibi civibus, hic peregrinis.
 tunc erit omnibus insipientibus ora tonantis, 115 summa potentia, plena scientia, pax rata sanctis :
 pax erit omnibus illa fidelibus, illa beata, irrevocabilis, invariabilis, intemerata, pax sine crimine, pax sine turbine, pax sine rixa—meta laboribus atque tumultibus, anchora fixa. 120 pax erit omnibus unica. sed quibus? immaculatis, pectore mitibus, ordine stantibus, ore sacratis.

 pax ea pax rata, pax superis data, danda modestis; plenaque vocibus atque canoribus atria festis. . . .
 Hic breve vivitur, hic breve plangitur, hic breve fletur;
 non breve vivere, non breve plaudere, retribuetur.
 o retributio! stat brevis actio, vita perennis;
 o retributio! caelica mansio stat lue plenis. 170 quid datur et quibus? aether egentibus et cruce dignis, sidera vermibus, optima sontibus, astra malignis. . . .
 Nunc tibi tristia, tunc tibi gaudia, gaudia quanta vox nequit edere, lumina cernere, tangere planta. 180 post nigra, post mala, post fera scandala quae caro praestat, absque nigredine lux, sine turbine pax tibi restat.
 sunt modo praelia, postmodo praemia. qualia? plena;
 plena refectio, nullaque passio nullaque poena.
 spe modo vivitur, et Syon angitur a Babylone: 185 nunc tribulatio, tunc recreatio, sceptrā, coronae. . . .
 Qui modo creditur, ipse videbitur atque scietur;
 ipse videntibus atque scientibus attribuetur.
 plena refectio tunc pia visio, visio Jesu;
 hunc speculabitur, hoc satiabitur Israel esu.
 hoc satiabitur, huic sociabitur, in Syon arce: 195
 o bone rex, ibi nullus eget tibi dicere 'parce'.
 cor miserabile, tempus inutile non erit ultra;
 nulla cadavera, nullaque funera, nulla sepulcra:
 quodque beatius est, mala longius omnia fient;
 ob tua crimina jam tua lumina non madefient. . . . 200 Urbs Syon aurea, patria lactea, cive decora, omne cor obruis, omnibus obstruis et cor et ora. 270

BERNARDUS MORLANENSIS

nescio, nescio quae jubilatio, lux tibi qualis, quam socialia gaudia, gloria quam specialis.
 laude studens ea tollere, mens mea victa fatiscit :
 o bona gloria, vincor, in omnia laus tua vicit.
 sunt Syon atria conjubilantia, martyre plena, 275 cive micantia, principe stantia, luce serena.
 sunt ibi pascua mitibus afflua, praestita sanctis ;
 regis ibi thronus, agminis et sonus est epulantis.
 gens duce splendida, concio candida vestibus albis ;
 sunt sine fletibus in Syon aedibus, aedibus almis. 280 sunt sine crimine, sunt sine turbine, sunt sine lite in Syon arcibus aeditioribus Israelitae. pax ibi florida, pascua vivida, viva medulla ;
 nulla molestia, nulla tragoedia, lacrima nulla.
 o sacra potio, sacra refectio, pax animarum ; 285
 o pius, o bonus, o placidus sonus, hymnus earum.
 sufficiens cibus est Deus omnibus ipse redemptis, plena refectio, propria visio cunctipotentis :
 ejus habent satis, his tamen est sitis ejus anhela, absque caloribus, absque laboribus, absque querela. . . . 290 Gens temeraria, dum licet, impia facta fleamus ; ille minaciter advenit arbiter, expaveamus. 1030 nemo capessere jus, mala plangere nemo relinquat ; gaudia flentibus, irreverentibus ira propinquat.
 jam tuba septima, plaga novissima, lux pia, dira intonat, ingruit, enitet, et venit ira.
 gens male conscia, quae fugientia sunt, fugiamus ; 1035 gens male conscia, lubrica gaudia flendo tegamus.
 stare refugimus, ad mala fluximus ; ad bona stemus ;
 hora novissima, tempora pessima sunt, vigilemus.

56. David's Lament over Saul and Jonathan

DOLORUM solacium, laborum remedium,
 mea mihi cithara
 nunc, quo major dolor est, justiorque maeror est, 5 plus est necessaria.

Strages magna populi,
 regis mors et filii,
 hostium victoria,
 ducum desolatio, 10
 vulgi desperatio
 luctu replent omnia.

Amalech invaluit,
 Israel dum corrui ;
 infidelis jubilat 15
 Philistaea,
 dum lamentis macerat
 se Judaea.

Insultat fidelibus
 infidelis populus, 20
 in honorem maximum
 plebs adversa,
 in derisum omnium
 fit deversa.

Quem primum his prae-buit, 25
 victus rex occubuit, talis est electio
 dei sui,
 talis consecratio
 vatis magni ! 30

Insultantes inquiunt : ‘ Ecce, de quo garriunt, qualiter hos prodidit
 deus suus,
 dum a multis occidit 35 dis prostratus.’

Saul, regum fortissime, virtus invicta Jonathae, qui vos nequivit vincere permissus est occidere. 40

Quasi non esset oleo consecratus dominico, scelestae manus gladio
 jugulatur in proelio.

Plus fratre mihi, Jonatha, 45
 in una mecum anima, quae peccata, quae scelera, nostra sciderunt viscera !

Expertes, montes Gelbiae, roris sitis et pluviae, 50 nec agrorum primitiae
 vestro succurrant incolae.

PETER ABAELARD

Vae, vae tibi, mādida tellus caede regia, qua et te, mi Jonatha, 55 manus stravit impia,

Ubi christus domini Israelque incliti

Tu mihi, mi Jonatha, flendus super omnia ;
inter cuncta gaudia
perpes erit lacrima.

Planctus, Sion filiae, 65
super Saul sumite,
largo cujus munere
vos ornabant purpurae.

Hēu, cur consilio
acquievi pessimo, 70
ut tibi praesidio
non essem in proelio ?
vel confossus pariter
morerer feliciter, cum, quid amor faciat, 75
manus hoc non habeat, et me post te vivere mori sit assidue,
nec ad vitam anima
satis sit dimidia. 80

PETER ABAELARD

Vicem amicitiae

58. A Mystery Play of the Raising of Lazarus

SUSCITATIO LAZARI

Ad quem istae personae sunt necessariae : persona Lazari, duarum sororum, quatuor Judaeorum, Jesu Christi, duodecim apostolorum (vel VI ad minus).

Imprimis, Lazaro languescente, duae sorores Maria et Martha, cum quatuor Judaeis, se maxime affligentes advenient, et assistentes ejus lectulo, cantabunt hos versus :

O SORS tristis, o sors dura, cujus gravis est censura ;
nam per tua modo jura languet frater, nostra cura.

Languet frater, et nos vere 5 facit sibi condolere.
sed tu, Deus, miserere, quique potes, tu medere.

Ad earum consolationem dicent Judaei :

Carissimae, flere desinite, nec adstantes ad fletum cogite ; 10
immo preces ad Deum mittite Lazaroque salutem poscite.

Quibus illae dicent :

Ite, fratres, ad summum medicum,
ite citi regem ad unicum, fratrem nostrum narrate languidum, 15 ut veniat et reddat validum.

HILARIUS

Illi autem cum venerint ad Jesum dicent :

Quia tu hunc diligis infirmatum graviter, ad te jussi fuimus venire celeriter :
qui summus es medicus, aegrum nostrum visita,
ut tibi deserviat sospitate reddita. 20

Jesus respondebit :

Morbus iste fratris mei non ad mortem erit ei ; sed evenit ut per eum manifestem vobis Deum.

Interim, cum illi redierint, Lazaro jam mortuo, duo ex illis Mariam ducent ad eum. Cui illa cantabit :

Ex culpa veteri 25
damnantur posteri
mortales fieri.

Hor ai dolor,
hor ést mis frere morx ;
por que gei plor. 30

Per cibum vetitum
nobis interitum
constat impositum.

Hor ai dolor . . .

Facta sum misera,
et soror altera,
per fratris funera.

Hor ai dolor . . . 40

Cum de te cogito, frater, et merito
mortem afflagito.

Hor ai dolor . . .

HILARIUS

Tunc duo Judaei consolantes eam dicent :

Cesset talis gemitus, cesset maeror penitus 50
cessentque suspiria ;
talis lamentatio,
talis ejulatio
non est necessaria.

Non per tales lacrimas 55
visum fuit animas
redisse corporibus :
cessent ergo lacrimae,
quae defunctis minime
proderunt hominibus. 60

Post haec veniet Martha cum aliis duobus Judaeis cantans :

Mors execrabilis,
mors detestabilis,
mors mihi flebilis !
Lase, chative,
dès que mis frere est morz, 65
porque sue vive ?

Fratris interitus
gravis et subitus
est causa gemitus.
Lase, chative . . . 70

Pro fratre mortuo mori non abnuo
nec mortem metuo. 75
Lase, chative . . .

HILARIUS

Ex fratris funere
recuso vivere : 80
vae mihi miserae !
Lase, chative . . .

Duo Judaei ad ejus solatium dicent :

Tolle fletum, quaesumus ; 85
nihil enim possumus per fletum proficere :
insistendum fletibus
esset, si quis talibus posset reviviscerè. 90

Quare non consideras
quia, dum te maceras,
nihil prodes mortuo ?
quare tu non respicis
quia nihil proficis 95
ut jam vivat denuo ?

Jesus ad discipulos dicet :

In Judaeam iterum
nos oportet pergere, ubi quiddam paululum
decrevi peragere. 100

Cui discipuli dicent :

Te nuper lapidibus volebant obruere ;
et vis tamen iterum in Judaeam tendere ?

Thomas vero dicet :

Ergo nos proficiscamur
et cum illo moriamur.

HILARIUS

Et Jesus ad illos :

Ecce dormit Lazarus, quem decet ut visitem : 105
vadam illuc igitur, ut a somno excitem.

Discipuli iterum :

Postquam dormit, salvus erit, salus enim somnum quaerit.

Jesus iterum ad illos :

Non est sicut creditis ; immo jam defunctus est ;
sed in patris nomine nobis suscitandus est. 110

Postea Martha dicet ad Jesum :

Si venisses primitus,
dol en ai,
non esset hic gemitus :
bais frere, perdu vos ai.

Quod in vivum poteras, 115
dol en ai,
hoc defuncto conferas :
bais frere, perdu vos ai.

Petis patrem quidlibet ;
dol en ai, 120
statim pater exhibet :
bais frere, perdu vos ai.

Jesus dicet :

Nunc comprimas has lacrimas et luctum qui te urget :
frater tuus est mortuus, sed facile resurget.

HILARIUS

Et illa ad eum :

Resurgere et vivere fratrem meum affirmo 125
tunc denique cum utique resurget omnis homo.

Et Jesus iterum :

Immo soror, non despera, nam sum ego vita vera ;
et quicumque credet ita vivet in me, qui sum vita. 130

Et qui vivens in me credet, mors ad illum non accedet :
credis, Martha, fore verum quod sit talis ordo rerum ?

Martha vero respondebit :

Te Christum, Dei filium, 135 ad hoc nostrum exilium venisse in auxilium ego credo.

Martha nuntians Mariae Jesum advenisse, dicet :

Jesus adest, soror carissima ;
cesset luctus et cesset lacrima ; 140 ipsum prece flectas humillima ut redeat ad fratrem anima.

Tunc Maria ad Jesum dicet :

Nullius solatio
mea desolatio valet unquam auferri : 145 sed credo consilium per te, Dei filium, posse mihi conferri.

HILARIUS

Tu ergo qui potens ^{es} qui mitis et clemens es ad tumultum venito;
fratrem meum suscita,
quem mors carni debita
surripuit tam cito. 150

Et Jesus ad illam :

Volo, soror, volo multum me deduci ad sepultum, ut in vitam revocetur
qui a morte detinetur. 155

Illa autem ducens Jesum ad sepulcrum, dicet :

Hic eum posuimus—
ecce locus, domine—
quem in patris poscimus suscitari nomine. 160

Jesus ad circumstantes :

Sustollatis lapidem qui superest tumulo, ut resurgat Lazarus coram omni populo.

Illi dicent :

Foetorem non poteris sustinere mortui, namque foetens graviter funus est quatridui. 165

Tunc Jesus suspiciens in caelum sic orabit ad patrem :

Pater, verbum tuum clarifica, Lazarumque, precor, vivifica :
sic filium mundo notifica, pater, in hac hora. 170

HILARIUS

Nec hoc dixi ex diffidentia, sed pro gentis hujus praesentia, ut de tua certi potentia credant absque mora.

Tunc dicet ad mortuum:

O Lazare, foras egredere, 175
aurae dono vitalis utere :
in paternae virtutis munere exi foras, et vita fruire.

Tunc, postquam surrexerit Lazarus, dicet Jesus :

Ecce vivit : nunc ipsum solvite et solutum abire sinite. 180

Lazarus solutus dicet astantibus :

Ecce quae sunt Dei magnalia vos vidistis et haec et alia.
ipse caelum fecit et maria ; mors ad ejus tremit imperia.

Et conversus ad Jesum, dicet :

Tu magister, tu rex, tu dominus, 185 tu populi delebis facinus :
quod praecipis, illud fit protinus, regni tui non erit terminus.

Quo finito, si factum fuerit ad matutinas, Lazarus incipiat : TE DEUM LAUDAMUS. Si vero ad vesperas, MAGNIFICAT ANIMA MEA DOMINUM.

Sed dum ferae debiles non possunt parare coepit omnes pariter, et sic vindicare

‘ Mihi jure virium secunda donetur ;

 urbs miseranda nimis, urbs dives rebus opimis, inclyta, sublimis, una fit ex minimis . . .
 alter Homerus ero, vel eodem major Homero, tot clades numero scribere si potero.
 ut res declarat, quae fundamenta locarat 85 Phoebus et aptarat, moenia vomer arat ;
 et fit opus clarum, quae rex fabricarat, aquarum, lustra leaenarum, silvaeque tuta parum, atria milvorum, locus et spelunca luporum ;
 pascua sunt pecorum templa, theatra, forum . . . 90 dum sic Troja cadis tantae discrimine cladis, 95 Aeneam tradis teque ratemque vadis :
 et Venus huic moli subduxit, provida proli ;
 huic domui soli nil nocuere doli.
 Hesperiae metas tibi longa spoponderit aetas ;
 te servat pietas, ut nova regna petas. 100 vi tempestatis sociis tibi rarificatis eripuit fatis per freta longa satis :

egrediensque fretis, qua sedes parta quietis, cursibus expletis a sapiente petis :
 hospita Cumanis, impulsibus acta profanis, 105 debita Trojanis fata, Sibylla, canis—quanta parent Rutuli, quam gloria surgat Iuli, qui regum tituli regnaque, qui populi.
 ergo donatae spe firmus, fidus Achate, Hesperiae latae tendis in arva rate : 110 plurima bella geris, tibi dum loca debita quaeris, sed fretus superis obvia quaeque teris : Turnus ut elatus tibi fata tuisque minatus occubuit stratus, dum fodis ense latus, pro qua certatur tibi regia virgo dicatur, 115 paxque reformatur dum tibi nupta datur.
 hinc processerunt qui Romam constituerunt, qui, dum bella gerunt, fortia quaeque terunt, et sibi fecerunt nomen, quod in astra tulerunt, ut, qui scripserunt pristina gesta, ferunt : 120 Romaque turrigerum caput effert, maxima rerum, tam dono superum quam studiis procerum.
 sic ex Aenea crescunt Romana trophaea, sic gens Romulea surgit ab Hectorea.

66. Wine, Woman, and Song

AESTUANS intrinsecus ira vehementi in amaritudine loquar meae menti :
 factus de materia levis elementi folio sum similis de quo ludunt venti.

THE 'ARCHIPOETA'

Cum sit enim proprium viro sapienti 5 super petram ponere sedem fundamenti, miser ego comparor fluvio labenti sub eodem aëre nunquam permanenti.

Feror ego veluti sine nauta navis, 10 ut per vias aëris vaga fertur avis :
non me tenent vincula, non me tenet clavis, quaero mei similes et adjungor pravis.

Mihi cordis gravitas res videtur gravis, jocus est amabilis dulciorque favis : 15 quicquid Venus imperat, labor est suavis, quae nunquam in cordibus habitat ignavis.

Via lata gradior more juventutis, implico me vitiis immemor virtutis, voluptatis avidus magis quam salutis, mortuus in anima curam gero cutis. 20

Res est arduissima vincere naturam, in aspectu virginis mentem esse puram ;
juvenes non possumus legem sequi duram læviumque corporum non habere curam.

Quis in igne positus igne non uratur ? 25 quis Papiæ demorans castus habeatur, ubi Venus digito juvenes venatur, oculis illaqueat, facie praedatur ?

Si ponas Hippolytum hodie Papiæ, non erit Hippolytus in sequenti die ; 30 Veneris in thalamos ducunt omnes viae, non est in tot turribus turris Alethiae.

THE 'ARCHIPOETA'

Secundo redarguor etiam de ludo ;
sed cum ludus corpore me dimittat nudo, frigidus exterius, mentis aestu sudo, 35 tunc versus et carmina meliora cudo.

Tertio capitulo memoro tabernam ;
illam nullo tempore spreui, neque spernam, donec sanctos angelos venientes cernam cantantes pro mortuis ' requiem aeternam '. 40

Meum est propositum in taberna mori, ubi vina proxima morientis ori :
tunc cantabunt laetius angelorum chori
' Sit Deus propitius huic potatori '.

Poculis accenditur animi lucerna, 45 cor imbutum nectare volat ad superna :
mihi sapit dulcius vinum in taberna
quam quod aqua miscuit praesulis pincerna.

Jejunant et abstinent poetarum chori, vitant rixas publicas et tumultus fori, 50 et ut opus faciant quod non possit mori, moriuntur studio subditi labori.

Unicuique proprium dat natura munus :
ego nunquam potui scribere jejunus ;
me jejunum vincere posset puer unus ; 55
sitim et jejunium odi tanquam funus.

Unicuique proprium dat natura donum :
ego versus faciens bibo vinum bonum et quod habent melius dolia cauponum ; tale vinum generat copiam sermonum. 60

THE 'ARCHIPOETA'

Tales versus facio, quale vinum bibo ;
nihil possum scribere nisi sumpto cibo :
nihil valent penitus quae jejunos scribo ;
Nasonem post calices carmine praeibo.

Mihi nunquam spiritus poetriae datur, 65 nisi prius fuerit venter bene satur :
dum in arce cerebri Bacchus dominatur,
in me Phoebus irruit et miranda fatur . . .

Sum locutus contra me quicquid de me novi 77 et virus evomui quod tam diu fovi :
vita vetus displicet, mores placent novi ;
homo videt faciem, sed cor patet Jovi. 80

Jam virtutes diligo, vitiis irascor, renovatus animo spiritu renascor ;
quasi modo genitus novo lacte pascor, ne sit meum amplius vanitatis vas cor . . .

In hac mensa novi regis novum pascha novae legis phase vetus terminat ;
vetustatem novitas,
umbram fugat veritas,
noctem lux eliminat

Quod in cena Christus gessit, 25
faciendum hoc expressit in sui memoriam ;
docti sacris institutis panem, vinum in salutis consecramus hostiam. 30

Dogma datur Christianis quod in carnem transit panis et vinum in sanguinem :
quod non capis, quod non vides animosa firmat fides praeter rerum ordinem.

Sub diversis speciebus, signis tantum et non rebus, latent res eximiae—
caro cibus, sanguis potus, manet tamen Christus totus sub utraque specie.

ST. THOMAS AQUINAS

A sumente non concisus, non confractus, non divisus, integer accipitur ; 45
sumit unus, sumunt mille, quantum isti, tantum ille, nec sumptus consumitur.

Sumunt boni, sumunt mali, sorte tamen inaequali 50
vitae vel interitus :
mors est malis, vita bonis ;
vide, paris sumptionis
quam sit dispar exitus.

Fracto demum sacramento 55
ne vacilles, sed memento tantum esse sub fragmento quantum toto tegitur :
nulla rei fit scissura, signi tantum fit fractura, 60 qua nec status nec statura signati minuitur.

82. Sequence for the Burial of the Dead

DIES irae, dies illa solvet saeculum in favilla, teste David cum Sibylla.

Quantus tremor est futurus, quando iudex est venturus 5 cuncta stricte discussurus.

? THOMAS OF CELANO

Tuba mirum spargens sonum per sepulcra regionum coget omnes ante thronum.

Mors stupebit et natura, 10 cum resurget creatura judicanti responsura.

Liber scriptus proferetur, in quo totum continetur unde mundus judicetur. 15

Judex ergo cum censebit.
quidquid latet, apparebit ;
nil inultum remanebit.

Quid sum miser tunc dicturus, quem patronum rogaturus, 20 dum vix justus sit securus ?

Rex tremendae majestatis, qui salvandos salvas gratis, salva me, fons pietatis.

Recordare, Jesu pie, 25
quod sum causa tuae viae, ne me perdas illa die.

Quaerens me sedisti lassus, redemisti crucem passus ;
tantus labor non sit cassus. 30

Juste judex ultionis, donum fac remissionis
ante diem rationis.

Ingemisco tanquam reus, culpa rubet vultus meus ;
supplici parce, Deus. 35

Qui Mariam absolvisti et latronem exaudisti,
mihi quoque spem dedisti ;

Preces meae non sunt dignae, sed tu, bonus, fac benigne, ne perenni cremer igne. 40

Inter oves locum praesta et ab haedis me sequestra statuens in parte dextra ; 45

Confutatis maledictis, flammis acribus addictis, voca me cum benedictis.

Oro supplex et acclinis, cor contritum quasi cinis, gere curam mei finis. 50

Lacrimosa dies illa, qua resurget ex favilla judicandus homo reus—
huic ergo parce, Deus, 55

Pie Jesu domine, dona eis requiem.

83. The Compassion of the Blessed Virgin Mary

STABAT mater dolorosa juxta crucem lacrimosa
 dum pendebat filius;
 cujus animam gementem contristantem et dolentem 5 pertransivit gladius.

O quam tristis et afflicta fuit illa benedicta mater unigeniti!
 quae mœrebat et dolebat 10 et tremebat, cum videbat nati poenas incliti.

Quis est homo, qui non fleret matrem Christi si videret in tanto supplicio? 15
 quis non posset contristari, piam matrem contemplari dolentem cum filio?

Pro peccatis suae gentis Jesum vidit in tormentis 20 et flagellis subditum, vidit suum dulcem natum morientem, desolatum, cum emisit spiritum.

JACOPONE DA TODI

Eja, mater, fons amoris, 25 me sentire vim doloris fac, ut tecum lugeam ;
fac, ut ardeat cor meum in amando Christum Deum, ut sibi complaceam. 30

Sancta mater, illud agas, crucifixi fige plagas
 cordi meo valide ;
tui nati vulnerati
jam dignati pro me pati 35 poenas mecum divide.

Fac me vere tecum flere, crucifixo condolere,
 donec ego vixero :
juxta crucem tecum stare, 40
te libenter sociare
 in planctu desidero.

Virgo virginum praeclara, mihi jam non sis amara, fac me tecum plangere ; 45 fac ut portem Christi mortem, passionis ejus sortem
 et plagas recolere.

Fac me plagis vulnerari, cruce hac inebriari 50
 ob amorem filii ;
inflammatum et accensus per te, virgo, sim defensum in die judicii.

Fac me cruce custodiri, morte Christi praemuniri, confoveri gratia ;
quando corpus morietur, fac ut animae donetur paradisi gloria.

VIRGA de Jesse prodiit, virga virens tenella,
quae tota florens exiit
de materna fiscella, purissima, sanctissima, 5

carens omni procella.

GIL DE ZAMORA

In templo cum virginibus

Deum contemplabatur.

Et sicut mente praeditas virgines diligebat, sic vagas et indomitas
acriter arguebat, 25
archetypa, zelotypa,
legifera, justifera,
utrasque dirigebat.

Huic spiritus angelici

QUONDAM fuit factus festus et vocatus ad comestus abbas, prior de Leycestris cum totus familia.

Abbas est sedere sursum 5
et prioris juxta ipsum :
ego miser stetit dorsum inter rascabilia.

Vinum venit sanguinatis ad prioris et abbatis : 10
nihil nobis paupertatis sed ad dives omnia.

Abbas bibit ad prioris, prior vero totum horis :
ego pauper stabat foris, 15
nil habens delicia.

Dixit abbas serviatis :
'date vinum nostris fratis ;
bene legunt et cantatis

Dixit prior ad abbatis : ‘ bene bibunt, habent satis ;
non est bonum ebriatis cant ad claustralia.’

Unus cano juniorum, 25
bonus lectus et cantorum irascatus ad priorum
dixit haec verbalia :

‘ Vos abbatis et prioris, bibis totum de liquoris : 30
nihil vobis de pudoris, sed totum de gulia.

Prior, vos non intendatis quantum sumus laboratis in legere et cantatis 35 per ista festalia.

Vos nec nobis nihil datis, nec abbatis permittatis facit nostris societatis sua curialia. 40

Qui stat, vide ne cadatis ;
multum enim de praelatis propter avaricia.

Propter cordis strictitatis 45

et sic propter parcitatis perderunt magnalia.

ANONYMOUS

Rogo, deus majestatis,

ut hoc vinum, quod bibatis,

Ad hoc verbum prior cursus furabatur sicut ursus :
unus vice atque rursus 55 momordavit labia.

(The altercation between the Prior and the Canon continues for 46 stanzas : at the end the Prior takes the initiative in making peace—)

Prior dixit : 'Gratias ego usque modo corde tego :
quod non feci, modo lego volo pacem facia.

Ergo tu me osculabis ? 245 quorum fratres tu fidabis, quod tu mihi condonabis ?
faciamus venia.'

(And all ends happily, in a manner described in a somewhat later version of the same song—)

Post haec omnes bibierunt et in vestes dormierunt, matutinas neglexerunt
usque diem claria.

97. Why we put a Weather-cock on the Church Spire

MULTI sunt presbyteri qui ignorant, quare super domum domini gallus solet stare ; quod propono breviter vobis propalare.
si vultis benevolas aures mihi dare.

Gallus est mirabilis Dei creatura, 5 et sic bonus presbyter ejus fit figura, qui praeest ecclesiae animarum cura, stans pro suis subditis contra nocitura.

Supra crucem positus gallus contra ventum caput diligentius erigit extantum ; 10 sic plebanus, ubi scit praedonis adventum, illi se objiciat pro grege bidentum.

Videmus, quod piger est gallus aliquando sive levis nimium contra ventum stando ; sic multi presbyteri quasi dormitando 15 locum dant diabolo, praedoni nefando.

Gallus regit plurimam turbam gallinarum, et sollicitudinem magnam habet harum ;
sic plebanus, capiens curam animarum, doceat et faciat quod sit Deo carum. 20

Gallus granum colligens convocat uxores et illud distribuit ante cariores ; tales discat presbyter pietatis mores, dando suis subditis scripturarum flores.

Gallus tempus praecinens horae nocturnalis 25 primitus a propriis se castigat alis ;
castigando primum se pastor fiat talis, tunc dicendo subvenit subditorum malis.

ANONYMOUS

Quasi rex in capite gallus coronatur, in pede calcaribus ut miles armatur, 30 quanto plus fit senior pennis deauratur, in nocte dum concinit, leo conturbatur :

Sic pastor, qui bene scit populo praeesse, pigros cum calcaribus monet indefesse, confortando debiles verbi Dei messe, 35 post laborem aureus ut rex debet esse.

Solet leo tremere de galli canore, et fugit diabolus solito de more gallus cum cantaverit, sed magis ab ore albi galli : reor hoc in figura fore. 40

Castitas albedine solet figurari, et plebani maxime solent honorari illi, qui luxuria nolunt inquinari ; ab his credo citius daemones fugari.

Gallus suas feminas solet verberare 45 has, quas cum extraneo novit ambulare ; sic sacerdos subditos debet castigare, contra legem domini qui solent peccare.

Basiliscus nascitur ovis de gallorum ;
sic crescit diabolus ex presbyterorum 50 magna negligentia, qui de subditorum non curant sceleribus nec de spe caelorum.

Pullos solet ducere gallus mutilatus et a mulieribus per hoc fit amatus ; sic pro caeli gloria presbyter castratus 55
Deo et hominibus per hoc erit gratus.

Gallus nunquam negligit tempus vespertinum, tunc cum suis subditis volat ad supinum, ut in nocte media tempus matutinum servis Dei praecinat ad opus divinum : 60

Sic et bonus presbyter, respuens terrena, ducat suos subditos ex inferni poena, praebens iter caelicum caeli per amoena

99. A Parson's life is the best

VIDE fabrum, fili mi, quomodo sit pictus in vultu carbonibus, viliter amictus, nam de die in diem sudat propter ictus, ut sit ei modicus et non lautus victus.

Vide carpentarium, qualiter intentus sit labori manuum, prout dat juvenus ;
nil valet in senio, quia tunc est lentus, et tunc lucrum deperit ei quasi ventus.

5

Videas pellicem male coloratum, fere prae vigiliis oculis orbatum ; 10 nunquam habet requiem nisi super stratum—dum quiescit modicum, dicit se beatum.

Sutoremque videas, qualiter sit unctus, manibus et pollice saepe male punctus, soccis atque subulis tota die junctus ; 15 apparet in facie quasi sit defunctus.

Licet satis utiles mundo sint textores, sunt tamen hominibus cunctis viliores, quamvis lucrum habeant, non tamen honores, nam corrupti furfures propinant livores. 20

Mercatores videas, quali cum labore vivunt, ut familiae praesint cum honore ;
 undas maris transvolant magno cum timore, ubi res et corpora perdunt cum dolore.

Piscatores videas, qualiter in mari 25 et in aquis aliis solent naufragari ;
 arte cum laboribus vix queunt ditari, quorum, dum nil capiunt, dies sunt amari.

Vide tabernarios nequiter viventes ;
 ipsi sunt divitias male possidentes, 30 ad aeterna gaudia non apponunt mentes, sed per mundi spatia sic defraudant gentes.

Laborare proprium est agricolarum, quamvis bonum opus sit, tamen est amarum fame, siti, frigore, aestu pluviarum, 35 de quorum miseriis non est loqui parum.

 ipsi sunt divitias vere possidentes;
 ad dolores aliquos non apponunt mentes, ipsi cantant altius nummos possidentes.

Dum matronae veniunt ad altare flentes, 45 ipsi possunt inopes juvare parentes; ipsi sacrificia sunt suscipientes—sunt, qui fiunt clerici, vere sapientes.

A Call to the Crusade

C. 1350

CHRISTIANI nominis corrui insignē, spurci pompa germinis et gentis indignae regnat in Jerusalem—quis ferro vel igne debeat propaginem sobolis malignae?

Capta est hereditas pendentis in ligno; 5 si quos regit veritas munere benigno, horum crucis pectora consignentur signo, publicentur robora populo maligno.

O florens militia Christianae gentis, quis ferat opprobria saecula regentis? 10 ordinetur acies populi credentis, fabricetur aries, dentur vela ventis.

Nostrae, fratres, vigeat disciplinae cultus, pax inter nos maneat, sit rancor indultus ;
 sentiant Jerusalem gentiles tumultus 15
 Christiani roboris viriles assultus.

Cur gens non opprimitur vitae bestialis, qua sic Christi premitur sedes principalis ?
 factum in prostibulum civitas regalis, versa est in stabulum domus specialis. 20

A summo pontifice exiit edictum, neminem detineat scelus vel delictum, indulgetur penitus culpaе maledictum, si quis occubuerit per iter indictum.

Vestris qui sceleribus estis involuti, 25 piscina comparuit congrua saluti, in qua quotquot sanguine fuerint abluti, laetabuntur illico caelum consecuti.

Ergo si vos moveat zelus domus Dei, rogo vos, admoneat illud Maccabaei 30 sub quo pauci totiens vicerunt Judaei ; valde mentes acuit tantae forma rei.

Constipetur classibus maris latitudo ;
 pleos, quirites, procures, regum celsitudo, ire si quem hostium terret multitudo, 35 noverit, quod desuper datur fortitudo.

Surgat invincibilis pastor Romanorum, accingatur nobilis probitas Francorum, producat agilis populus Anglorum, necnon et horribilis turba Bohemorum. 40

Sedens adhuc modicum cinere conspersa

Ad hoc sulcant aequora plus quam rates mille 45 plenae gente libera mentis non pusillae ;
 ni gurges impediat Charybdis et Scillae, tutum est ut fugiat filius ancillae.

Ergo nunc accelerent fortes regionum, cedat amor sanguinis et cognationum : 50 aderit in proelio Deus ultionum,

NOTES

I, p. 1. I query the ascription to St. Hilary only because the great name of Wilhelm Meyer is against it. Nothing else would make me doubt, the testimony of four early and good MSS. being in his favour. It is the one 'admittedly foreign element'¹ which found its way into the hymnal of the ancient Irish Church. Best text and commentary in A. S. Walpole's Early Latin Hymns (Cambridge 1922), p. 5. Metre: trochaic tetrameter catalectic; mostly quantitative, but accent is beginning to tell, e. g. 3 vid, 56 nuntiát.

6. El, a Hebraism, naturally altered in several MSS. to the familiar, but here very feeble, vel. 16 nuntiatum is difficult; 'there was brought Herod a piece of news likely to be hurtful to his kingship'. 19 Nazareth, locative. 25 the scansion is difficult: are we to pronounce vínium quód derát hydriis, depending on the accent of ὕδρις, or vínium quód deérat hýdris? In any case a conjecture by Canon A. J. Mason, mutuari (MSS. motari, motare, mutare, motuari) has much improved the sense. 34 'he is assailed with false charges to be delivered up to Pilate.' 49 trementes, in loose apposition to milites two lines before: almost an accusative absolute, and ambigentes (58) is of much the same kind. There are ten more lines after 64 in most of the MSS. but they seem doxological, added to round off the text for use as a hymn.

2, p. 3. Sometimes attributed to St. Hilary, but without any certainty: quoted by the Venerable Bede, but surely of an earlier age than his. 'It manifestly contains the germ of the Dies Irae, to which, however inferior in lyrical fervour and effect, it scarcely yields in devotion and simple realization of its subject.’¹ Text and commentary Walpole, op. cit., p. 381. Metre: alphabetical sequence of trochaic tetrameter catalectic couplets, almost accentual.

¹ Bernard and Atkinson, The Irish Liber Hymnorum (Bradshaw Society), 1898: Text, vol. i, p. 36; Irish preface and glosses ii, p. 18; valuable introduction and commentary ii, p. 125.

NOTES

3 parebit = apparebit. 17 a dextris, ‘to those on the right hand’. Note 27 mendicum, 34 moritur, as if fourth conjugation, 39 Jerusalem.

3, p. 5. Found in the medieval breviaries (Mozarabic, Sarum, York, Aberdeen) and in modern Anglican hymn books without the first stanza, which is a close paraphrase of Psalm lxxx. 1, 2. English Hymnal 14, Hymns Ancient and Modern (a poor translation) 55. Text and commentary in Walpole, op. cit., p. 52. Metre: iambic dimeters acatalectic in four-line stanzas, quantitative.

20 alacris, masculine. An archaic form, found in Virgil and elsewhere.

4, p. 6. English Hymnal 52, Hymns A. & M. 2. Text and commentary in Walpole, op. cit., p. 35. Metre as no. 3: note 24, ebrietatem.

4 dierum: a participle used as an adjective can take a genitive. 15 secundet, turn to good. 16 gerendi, to act wisely. 29 cursus, accusative plural: ‘its general course’. 30 totus, attracted to masculine sc. Deus.

5, p. 7. Probably, but not certainly, by St. Ambrose. A faint tendency towards rhyme or assonance dissuades me slightly from Ambrosian authorship, but all else is in its favour. English Hymnal 192, Hymns A. & M. 455. Text and commentary in Walpole, op. cit., p. 112. Metre as no. 3.

8 sponsis, the brides of Christ. 15 nescire, the direct object of adauge: ‘increase in our understandings the gift of ignorance of . . .’

¹ J. M. Neale, Mediaeval Hymns (2nd edition), 1863, p. 9. His translation is reprinted in Collected Hymns (1914), p. 10.

6, p. 8. Ascribed to St. Ambrose, but probably not his: yet almost equally early. English Hymnal 164, Hymns A. & M. 14. Text and commentary in Walpole, op. cit., p. 290. Metre as no. 3.

7, p. 8. Cathemerinon, vi. 1-16 and 125-162. The last seven stanzas are found as a hymn in the Sarum and Mozarabic breviaries: English Hymnal 104. Text [of the hymn stanzas] and commentary in Walpole, op. cit., p. 131. Iambic dimeters catalectic, quantitative, in four-line stanzas.

8, p. 10. Cathemerinon, ix. 1-28 and 109-114. The whole poem is a 'hymnus omnius horae', but a cento, beginning with the fourth stanza, has long been used as a Christmas hymn, especially in England, with the refrain 'saeculorum saeculis' after each stanza. English Hymnal 613, Hymns A. & M. 56. Text [of the hymn stanzas] and commentary in Walpole, op. cit., p. 123. Trochaic tetrameters catalectic, quantitative, in three-line stanzas.

men was possibly Caelius. He may have been a Spaniard: more probably an Italian, who spent a great part of his life, and wrote, in Achaia. Centos from this hymn have been used in various parts of the Western Church, the whole of it in the Mozarabic rite. First part of hymn, English Hymnal 18, 38, Hymns A. & M. 483, 75. Text and commentary in Walpole, op. cit., p. 151. Metre as no. 3: some rhyme, but less than no. 10, alphabetical by stanzas.

81 xeromyrrham, dried myrrh. 82 compares, the women who were the Lord's companions.

13, p. 18. Perhaps early sixth century. Used at Compline in the Mozarabic and Ambrosian breviaries, and in some fairly late French uses. English Hymnal 81, Hymns A. & M. 95. Text and commentary in Walpole, op. cit., p. 259. Metre as no. 3, but becoming nearly accentual, with faint traces of rhyme.

14, p. 19. Perhaps early sixth century. English Hymnal 254, Hymns A. & M. 1. Text and commentary in Walpole, op. cit., p. 293. Metre as no. 3, with faint traces of rhyme.

15 It is difficult to say whether mundi is the genitive of 'the world', depending on abstinentiam, or a nominative plural 'clean'.

15, p. 20. Of nearly the same date as no. 14. English Hymnal 264, Hymns A. & M. 15. Text and commentary in Walpole, op. cit., p. 299. Metre as no. 14, but slightly more accentual.

16, p. 21. Venantius [Honorius Clementianus] Fortunatus was born about 530 near Treviso, and set out about 565 for the shrine of St. Martin at Tours, living the rest of his life in Gaul. He became the friend and adviser of Queen Radegund, the separated wife of King Lothair I of Neustria, then Abbess of the convent of the Holy Cross at Poitiers which she had founded. This hymn was written for the reception of a fragment of the true Cross, on 19 November 569, sent her by the emperor Justin II from Constantinople. After the death of Radegund (597) he became bishop of Poitiers, and died some time after 600. English Hymnal 94, Hymns A. & M. 96. Text and commentary in Walpole, op. cit., p. 174. Metre as no. 3, with faint traces of rhyme.

6 vestigia, feet. 16 An addition to Psalm xcvi. 10 not found in the Hebrew or the Vulgate (xcv. 10), but in one good MS. of the LXX, the Old Latin, and certain other versions. 26 nectare, accusative.

17, p. 22. Written on the same occasion as no. 16. English Hymnal 95, Hymns A. & M. 97. Text and commentary in Walpole, op. cit., p. 167. Metre as no. 8. For the hymn by St. Thomas Aquinas beginning with the same words see no. 78.

24 The second dulce is ablative, as mite in l. 27. 25 viscera, fibres.

18, p. 23. The ascription to Fortunatus is doubtful. English Hymnal 214, 215, Hymns A. & M. 449. Text and commentary in Walpole, op. cit., p. 198. Metre as no. 3, with traces of rhyme.

19, p. 24. English Hymnal 2, Hymns A. & M. 46. Text and commentary in Walpole, op. cit., p. 302. Metre as no. 3, but accent now largely takes the place of quantity, and there is a regular rhyme aabb. For the hymn by St. Thomas Aquinas beginning with the same words see no. 79.

7 audita praeconia, accusative absolute.

20, p. 25. This fine but difficult hymn (or rather cosmogonical and eschatological poem, though it was used as a hymn in Ireland) is attributed to St. Columba in some good and early MSS.: for arguments for and against his authorship see the work by Bernard and Atkinson cited on p. 205 note 1, where (i, pp. 62 sqq., and ii, pp. 140 sqq.)

NOTES

there is a very full discussion of the Irish-Latin prefaces which are found with it in the MSS., translation, and a most valuable commentary. It is at any rate early Irish, and of a date before the Vulgate had ousted the Old Latin version in Ireland. Text in Bernard and Atkinson, op. cit., vol. i, p. 66, or Blume, Analecta Hymnica medii ævi, li, p. 275. Metre (see Bernard and Atkinson, ii, p. xxvi): iambic dimeter rhyming couplets, accentual, allowing trochaic substitution (e. g. line 1) rather freely: six couplets to a stanza, if I am right in condemning the last two lines of the first stanza: the stanzas alphabetical. In some good MSS. the hymn proper is followed by a refrain, to be repeated after each stanza, or after every other stanza, as follows:—

Quis potest Deo placere	novissimo in tempore
variatis insignibus	veritatis ordinibus
exceptis contemptoribus	mundi praesentis istius ?

1 prosātor, from proserere, ‘first begetter’. 12: the two next lines are surely a later addition; they are quite unnecessary to the sense and spoil the metrical scheme, which is stated in the [Irish] preface to the hymn in two eleventh-century MSS. to be composed of stanzas of six [double] lines. 17 The goodness of the Godhead forbids It to be idle, and so It creates the heavenly orders. 48 parasito praecipites, cast headlong by the deceiver. 60 praesagmine, with prophecy. 97 nubes, nominative: pontias brumalias, the winter sea water, is the object of the verb invehunt. 100 dodrantibus, the floods of ocean, because the sea is one-fourth part (dodrans = $\frac{1}{4}$, not $\frac{3}{4}$ as in classical Latin) of the world. 106 thesauris, the store-chambers in which the winds are kept. 128 tellus treated as second declension. 134 dialibus = divinis. 137 iduma, a Hebraism, ‘hand’: it is ablative, in apposition to suffultu. 220 polyandria, abodes of many men, i. e. sepulchres. 221 frigola, uncertain meaning: frivola hardly seems probable. 231 Virgilio not the poet, but [one of] the Pleiades. This is a difficult stanza. Its explanation is given by a heading in one of the MSS. 'De tribus sideribus igneis Christum significantibus': Christ, like Orion, has left the brightness of heaven and gone beneath the waters (Thetis): He has already shone on the earth like the Morning Star (Lucifer) and will be the Evening Star (Vesper, Vesperugo) at His second coming.

21, p. 35. From the Antiphonary of Bangor,¹ which was written about 680: it should be of the very beginning of the seventh century, and is almost certainly of Irish origin. English Hymnal 307, Hymns A. & M. 313. Text and commentary in Walpole, op. cit., p. 345. Metre: iambic trimeter acatalectic, accentual, in couplets.

15, 16 accedunt . . . sumant, 'all come up . . . to take . . .' 21 ω must be pronounced ōō, as a dissyllable is required by the metre. The word omega had not come into existence at this date.

22, p. 36. Some think that the hymn originally consisted only of ll. 1-18, the next two stanzas and the doxology being added to make it definitely a hymn for a dedication festival. Certainly the oldest MS. in which it is contained omits the seventh and eighth stanzas. English Hymnal 169, Hymns A. & M. 396. Text and commentary in Walpole, op. cit., p. 378. Metre as no. 8, but accentual.

1 Ferusálem. 9 pro can take the accusative nomen in Latin of this age: it would be wrong to emend to nomine, as there is no other elision in the poem.

23, p. 37. Almost, but not quite, certainly by Paulus Diaconus, the historian of the Lombards and friend of Charlemagne. English Hymnal 223 (first four stanzas only) and 224 (stanzas 5, 7, 8). Text in Duemmler, Poetae Latini aevi Carolini, i, p. 83. The beginnings of the half-lines of the first stanza gave the (continental) names to the notes of modern music. Metre : Sapphic, quantitative.

24, p. 39. Of uncertain date, but the first half of the ninth century seems probable : it would appear to be a hymn 'struck up' by pilgrims when they came within sight of Rome. Translation in J. A. Symonds, Wine, Women, and Song, Introduction, § v. Text in Traube, Abhandlungen der Kgl. Bayer. Akademie (Philos.-Philol. Kl.) xix, pp. 299-309. Metre : dactylic tetrameter acatalectic, accentual, in six-line stanzas, rhyming aaaaaa.

25, p. 39. This must be of nearly the same date as the last : same metre, text in Traube, ibidem, and in Strecker, Carmina Cantabrigiensia (Berlin 1926), p. 105. By a Veronese poet, who bewails that his favourite little clerk or choir-boy has been carried off by a rival.

3 archos : the 'first principle' = the Almighty. 5 furis, the kidnapper. 7, 8 : my grief and my appeal to fate is not feigned, but real. 12 amabo, 'please', 'I ask you'. 14, 15 A reference to the story of Deucalion and Pyrrha.

26, p. 40. Irish, perhaps of a date even earlier than that to which I have ascribed it, as it is found in ninth-century MSS. Loricae are typical of Celtic hymnody : the most familiar perhaps are the Lorica of St. Patrick (written in Irish language, translation English Hymnal 212), and the Lorica of Loding, Suffragare trinitatis unitas (wrongly called the Lorica of Gildas), of which the best text is in Jenkinson's Hisperica Famina (Cambridge, 1908). The essence of the Lorica is the prayer for divine protection in detail ; in every walk and activity of life, on every part of the human being, spiritual and bodily. Text in Blume, Analecta Hymnica, li, p. 299. Metre : trochaic dimeter acatalectic, accentual, with internal rhyme.

NOTES

1 sator cf. 20, prosator. 3 es qui potens: the other lines of this hymn are in such formal rhyme that I have sometimes doubted whether this half-line was something like astra tollens, finally forced out of the text by a gloss potens. But the MSS. of this hymn are so early (i.e. so near the date of its composition) that I dare not assume such a corruption. 4 petra: Greek words are used throughout, often in a rather tortured sense. 5 creta = creata, as 8 crevit = creavit. 6 aplustra: strictly the ornamented sterns—here simply ‘ships’; flustra, calm seas. 7 celox, a light, quick boat, a cutter. 9 the earth beneath, the sky above. 12 sqq. trude tuā etrā taetrā piacula . . . quae capesso et facesso. 15 σάρκος. 16 umbo = scutum, lorica. 20 uti, a Greek construction: ‘that I may keep and use my body, and my heart too . . .’. 24 These words are in apposition to manus, the hand [of God] in the next line. 27 θεῶν. 28 χέω.

27, p. 41. St. Theodulph was of Spanish Gothic origin, bishop of Orleans: for his life and literary work see Manitius, Geschichte der lat. Lit. des Mittelalters, i, p. 537; for this hymn and its versions, Julian’s Dictionary of Hymnology, p. 426. The whole is a poem of 78 lines, of which the first 22 are here printed: these—especially the first part of them—have become very familiar in hymn form, and have been used for the Palm Sunday procession throughout the Western Church. English Hymnal 622 (621), Hymns A. & M. 98. Text in Duemmler, Poetae Latini aevi Carolini, i, p. 558. Metre: quantitative elegiacs.

21, 22. I regret that these lines are omitted from modern texts of All glory, laud, and honour. Neale wrote:—

Be Thou, O Lord, the Rider,
And we the little ass;
That to God’s holy city
Together we may pass.

28, p. 42. Walahfrid Strabo (for a fuller account of his life and work see Manitius, op. cit., p. 302) born about 808 in Swabia, was educated first at the monastery of Reichenau on an island in Lake Constance, and then at Fulda, where he studied under Hrabanus Maurus (see no. 31): he became abbot of Reichenau in 838. Although he had been tutor to Charles the Bald, he espoused, on the death of Louis the Pious in 840, the cause of Charles's elder brother Lothair, and this caused his exile to Spire, but he was restored to his monastery in 842. He was drowned in the Loire in 849, on a journey to his former royal pupil. Besides many sacred poems, his reputation survives by a delightful work on his garden, from which the following lines are taken. It begins with an account of the way in which he reclaimed wild ground, and continues with a catalogue of the several flowers and herbs in it, with especial reference to their dietetic and medicinal properties. Text in Duemmler, P. L. aevi Carolini, ii, p. 335. Metre: quantitative hexameters, on the classical model.

29, p. 44. English Hymnal 213. Found in a St. Gall MS. which is probably as early as the ninth century: no guesses at authorship have been very happy. Dreves, Anal. Hymn. ii, p. 39, and elsewhere. Metre: trochaic tripodies, accentual, in four-line stanzas, faint traces of rhyme.

5-8 Ave is the palindrome of Eva.

30, p. 45. I know nothing of the author of this poem beyond what he tells us in l. 23—that he fought in Lothair's army at Fontenoy where the Franks were utterly defeated by the Normans in 841. Text in Duemmler, P. L. aevi Carolini, ii, p. 137. Tune in E. de Coussemaker,¹ Histoire de l'harmonie au moyen âge (Paris, 1852), Appendix, p. iv. Metre: trochaic tetrameters catalectic, accentual, in three-line stanzas, alphabetical (A-P).

¹ I am told that too much reliance should not be placed on Coussemaker's transcriptions from neums into modern notation.

NOTES

25 jugeri, a doubtful word in the MS., something like iuieri. Pertz conjectured jugeri = iugi, the shoulder of the hill.

31, p. 47. The most famous of all Latin hymns: it has been ascribed to various authors, and may possibly be the work of Hrabanus Maurus, abbot of Fulda and archbishop of Mainz. English Hymnal 153, 154, Hymns A. & M. 157. Metre: iambic dimeters acatalectic, in four-line stanzas, with faint traces of rhyme.

32, p. 48. By the unfortunate Godescalc (see Manitius, op. cit., p. 568), the monk persecuted by Hincmar for his heresy on predestination. He wrote it between 840 and 845: a boy monk at Orbais, to whom he was greatly attached, had asked him for a poem on the Trinity, and this is his reply, written in exile in Italy. Text in Traube, P. L. ævi Carolini, iii, p. 731, and Dreves, Analecta Hymnica, xix, p. 10. Tune in Coussemaker, op. cit., Appendix, p. v. Metre: a very elaborate but regular six-line stanza, accentual, as follows, rhyming throughout the poem on the letter *e*¹:—

iambic dimeter acatalectic (bis) trochaic dimeter acatalectic (bis) trochaic monometer acatalectic trochaic dimeter catalectic, or u	—		u	—		u	—		u	—

—	u		—	u		—	u		—

¹ In most stanzas, but not all, there is a double or feminine rhyme between lines 3 and 5: and an inclination towards an internal rhyme in lines 3 and 4. There is another poem by Godescalc, of 140 lines, rhyming entirely on the letter i, in du Méril, Poésies populaires latines antérieures au douzième siècle, 1843, p. 177.

7 It would also be possible to remove the commas after mihi and miserule, regarding the latter as an adverb. 40 procedente : an ablative, simul atque being regarded as a preposition governing that case = cum.

33, p. 50. Not later than the ninth century. English Hymnal 63, Hymns A. & M. 82. Text in Dreves, Anal. Hymn. ii, p. 41, and in all the great collections of hymns. Metre as no. 8.

11, 12 Some of the oldest MSS. have a different and possibly the original version :

ut sinas nobis audire paschale mysterium quod canunt Dei manentes in domo per saecula.

34, p. 51. St. Donatus was an Irishman, bishop of Fiesole in the middle of the ninth century. The poem has often been printed—best in Traube, P. L. aevi Carolini, iii, p. 691. Metre : quantitative elegiacs.

2 Scottia : Ireland.

35, p. 51. Written in 888 on the accession of Odo or Eudes, called the 'Count of Paris', to the kingdom of the Franks. Text in P. von Winterfeld, P. L. aevi Carolini, iv, p. 137. Metre : accentual iambic dimeters acatalectic, in four-line stanzas, rhyming aaaa.

28 Judas, Maccabaeus. 36 sicera, beer.

36, p. 53 : Written about 892, when Modena was at peace : but it was soon to have a very real relation to facts, when an Hungarian army invaded Italy about 900 and besieged the city a few years later. This poem is preserved in a contemporary MS. belonging to the Cathedral at Modena, written between 892 and 900. Text in Traube, P. L. aevi Carolini, iii, p. 703. Metre : iambic trimeters acatalectic, in six-line stanzas, rhyming on the letter a throughout the poem except in ll. 19, 20.

21 fortia, an Italianism, forza, a force. 25-26 The year before a church had been begun near the walls, in honour of the Saviour, the Blessed Virgin, and St.

John: hence this triple invocation. 35 'The line might also be punctuated resultet echo comes 'Eja vigila' but I prefer that which I have given in the text.

37, p. 54. A poem of the Caroline age, though it has only reached us in later MSS., when it had found its way into the breviaries of several south-French uses. Text in Dreves, Anal. Hymn. xii, p. 55, and in Strecker, P. L. aevi Carolini, iv, p. 661. Metre as no. 33, with an inclination towards a rhyme on a, especially towards the end of the poem.

38, p. 55. A sequence for Septuagesima, almost certainly by Notker of St. Gall, for whose life and the well-known story of how he fitted words to the neums of the final Alleluia in the Gradual see Julian, op. cit., p. 812. Text of this sequence (English Hymnal 494, Hymns A. & M. 295) in Blume and Bannister, Anal. Hymn. liii, p. 60. The metre is irregular, and the whole is indeed more rhythmic prose than verse: but if ll. 1, 2 be regarded as introductory, it will be found that the stanzas, which are separated by the alleluias, then fall into pairs, corresponding in the number of syllables in each line: so that lines 3:5, 4:6, 7:10, 8:11, 9:12, 13:18, 14:19, 15:20, 16:21, 17:22, and so on, are isosyllabic; the sequence is printed in Anal. Hymn. so as to show this correspondence.

39, p. 57. Tenth century, and probably early. It seems like a French copy of a German model—Germany had no sequences for Advent—but it was most of all used in England. The fact that it rhymes throughout on the letter a shows that it follows a very early type. English Hymnal 10. Text in Blume and Bannister, Anal. Hymn. liii, p. 3. Metre irregular, but isosyllabic correspondences as in no. 38.

tion of Seneca's tragedies, see Manitius, op. cit., i, p. 433. This pleasant lay is probably but not certainly his, for he had followers who could write in the same style. Text in P. L. aevi Carolini, iv, p. 430. Metre: iambic dimeters acatalectic, in four-line stanzas, quantitative but verging on accentual, rhyming on the letter a throughout.

7 nominative absolute. 13 oscina, the songs of a singing-bird, oscen. 16 olos = olor; croëma for the swan's voice does not seem to be found elsewhere. 17 lusciola = lusciniola. 43 cf. 56, Codrús: from Virgil, Ecl. vii. 26. 45 auro, on a golden throne. 57 The poet has misunderstood his Virgil and thinks that cicadis (abl. plural in Ecl. ii. 13) is (nom. sing.) a bird. 70 aumatia, a rare word of rather uncertain meaning—a quiet nook or recess.

41, p. 61. Between 926, the defeat of Sictric of Northumbria, and 934, when Athelstan and the Pictic king had become enemies. Probably a letter of congratulation from a continental recipient of Athelstan's bounty through the mission of Cenwald, bishop of Worcester, in 928. Text in W. A. Stevenson, English Historical Review, vol. xxvi (1911), p. 482. Metre: four-line stanzas, each line consisting of two trochaic dimeters catalectic, accentual, with assonance at the caesura and at the ends of lines. But the measure is rough, and an extra syllable is sometimes found, as in ll. 9, 10. See Stevenson, op. cit., pp. 483–484.

3 clitonem: of royal blood, noble. 5, 6 'whose king, king Athelstan, . . .'. 9 the Pictish king was Athelstan's faithful ally. velum, fleet. The text is unfortunately insecure throughout.

42, p. 61. Found in tenth-century MSS., some with tunes, of which two are given by Coussemaker, op. cit. The poem is an invitation by a young man to a girl to supper in his lodgings: the stanzas in inverted commas are her share of the dialogue. Translation in J. A.

Symonds, op. cit., Introduction, § v. Text in Strecker, Carmina Cantabrigiensia, p. 69, Dreves,¹ Anal. Hymn. xi, p. 57, but it has several times been printed, and I have used all the editions to make a readable if somewhat eclectic text. Metre: four-line stanzas, rhyming aabb, each line consisting of four feet, dactyls or trochees, accentual.

43, p. 63. Also used for the Circumcision and Epiphany, and later for various votive masses of the B.V.M. Eleventh century or perhaps a little earlier, probably of French origin. English Hymnal 22. Text in Blume and Bannister, Anal. Hymn. liv, p. 5. Metre: isosyllabic correspondence of stanzas (1-2, 3-4-5-6-7-8, 9-10, 11-12) as in nos. 38 and 39, but there is also a more regular metrical scheme than in those earlier sequences:

		„ dimeter „ „ monometer „
Stanzas 3-8	{	trochaic dimeter catalectic (bis)
		„ monometer acatalectic

		„ monometer acatalectic
Stanzas 11, 12	{	dactylic dimeter acatalectic (bis)

The scansion is accentual: rhyme, though not quite systematic, is plentiful.

49, p. 72. From a long poem of 300 lines by an ecclesiastic, possibly named Wido, connected with the cathedral church of Ivrea in Northern Italy, about 1075. The poet meets a lovely maiden and asks her who she is. She replies; he tells her of the gifts with which he would like to load her—this forms the bulk of the poem, conceived in terms of stilted imagery, and is here omitted—and concludes with a close description of her beauty. Text in Duemmler, Anselm der Peripatetiker (Halle, 1872), Appendix, p. 94. Metre: quantitative leonine elegiacs, cristati, a feminine or dissyllabic rhyme between the caesura and the end of the line.

50, p. 73. Reginald, born at 'Fagia' (it is suggested that this may have been Tiffauges, in the north of Poitou), and monk of Canterbury, was writing in the first decade of the twelfth century, and died some time after 1109. Many of his poems—including the longest, of over 3,000 lines—treat of a Syrian hermit named Malchus, whose life was written by St. Jerome, and this ingenious trifle is on the same subject. Text in Dreves, Anal. Hymn. i, p. 385. Metre: the long trochaic line (cf. nos. 33, 37) is split at the diaeresis after the fourth foot and an elaborate rhyme system introduced, so that the stanza is (accentual):—

51, p. 75. Sigebert of Liège or Gembloux is better known as an ecclesiastical historian, but also wrote poems, such as the 'Passion' of the Theban Legion. This is from his Passio Sanctae Luciae, a long poem printed by Duemmler in the Abhandlungen of the Berlin Academy, 1893, Phil.-Hist. Klasse, Abh. I. Metre: quantitative alcaïcs, on the classical model, with an inclination towards rhyme aabb.

52, p. 76. I have put the date of this poem, which stands very high in the secular poetry of the middle ages, rather earlier than is usually found in the books of reference, because I think that there is a good deal of force in Brinkmann's argument¹ that the Metamorphosis Goliae imitates the Phyllis and Flora: the Metamorphosis Goliae must have been written about 1150, and our present poem is therefore earlier. It is said—but I do not feel the argument wholly convincing—that the scenery described in the poem indicates an Italian origin. It is Southern, I think, though I should hesitate to name the country. Translations in Wright, The Latin Poems commonly attributed to Walter Mapes (London, 1841), p. 363, and (ll. 1-48 only) J. A. Symonds, Wine, Women, and Song, xvi, no. 28. St. Samson was a British saint, of about the middle of the sixth century, who crossed the Channel and ruled the monastery of Dol. 58, p. 99. Hilarius was probably an Englishman, though he lived most of his life in France: see the article on him in the Dictionary of National Biography; we know little for certain except that he was Abaelard's pupil in Paris and, after a somewhat stormy youth (if we may judge from his poems), became a Canon of Ronceray. The Poems ('Versus et ludi') were published at Paris by J. J. Champollion-Figeac¹ in 1838: the text of this play is at p. 24. Compare the Lazarus play printed by Wright, du Ménil, and last and best by E. de Coussemaker, Drames Liturgiques du Moyen Age (1861), p. 223, from a MS. of St. Benoît-sur-Loire now at Orleans. 'Il est de beaucoup supérieur,' says Coussemaker, 'à celui de Hilaire² . . . D'un autre côté, ces deux drames n'ont pas le même caractère; celui de Saint-Benoît est tout-à-fait liturgique; il était représenté dans l'église. Celui d'Hilaire n'a pas été composé pour la même destination. Il est de ceux qui furent représentés au théâtre.' Metre: variations of trochaic and dactylic measures,³ accentual; it would take too much space to give the whole scheme here, but they are easily worked out.

² I do not agree with this judgement.

Metre : four-line stanzas rhyming aaa, the first three 'goliardic' (no. 52), accentual, the fourth a quantitative hexameter. This curious combination is not uncommon in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries, and is especially appreciated if the fourth (hexameter) line can be a quotation from Virgil or Horace, or a proverb.

60, p. 108. Adam (le Breton) of St. Victor led an uneventful life so far as we know, working and writing in the Abbey of St. Victor in the suburbs of Paris ; some of his sequences passed into liturgical use in his life-time. He was a master of imagery drawn from the Old Testament and nature, and some students of Latin hymnology consider him the greatest of hymn writers in the West : I personally think that, great poems as these sequences are, they are excelled by the Lauda Sion of St. Thomas Aquinas (no. 80). They were early printed by Clichoveus (1515), critically edited in France by Léon Gautier (1858), and are found in a worthy edition, with English translation, by Digby S. Wrangham (1881), from which this text is taken (vol. i, p. 194). Metre : a six-line stanza of accentual trochaic dimeters, of which ll. 3 and 6 are catalectic in stanzas 1, 2, 3, 4, 9, 10, acatalectic in 5, 6, 7, 8 : all rhyme aabccb.¹

Vatican MS.; there are eight stanzas of it altogether, but the text of the later ones is very corrupt. Metre: a nine-line stanza, accentual, of which ll. 1-4 6, 8 are trochaic dimeters catalectic, 5, 7, 9 trochaic monometers acatalectic: the first four lines of each stanza rhyme aaaa.

62, p. 111. I am sorry to say that the usual attribution to St. Bernard becomes more and more doubtful on a closer examination, and the only consolation for the loss of him as author is that this lovely poem may possibly be of English origin, judging from the nationality of the best MSS. in which it is preserved: it seems clear from these that it is closely associated with the Sacrament: it is a meditation on the Holy Communion, and not on the Holy Name. English Hymnal 238, 419, Hymns A. & M. 177, 178. In establishing the text of this hymn, I have had the great advantage of using the collations which my friend Mr. Eric Maclagan, C.B.E., Director of the Victoria and Albert Museum, has most generously placed at my disposal. He has personally examined all the important MSS., which range from the twelfth to the fifteenth century: the best of all perhaps is in the Missal of Lesnes Abbey (near Greenwich) written between 1178 and 1220, now in the Museum under Mr. Maclagan's charge.

It is not found with the name of Adam of St. Victor, but is very much of his school (see also no. 72). It may indeed be said that it is by a close and worthy imitator. I quote four stanzas out of twelve:

Verbum Dei, Deo natum quod nec factum nec creatum venit de caelestibus;
hoc vidit, hoc attrectavit, hoc de caelo reseravit
Johannes hominibus . . .

Audiit in gyro sedis quid psallant cum citharoedis quater seni proceres:
de sigillo Trinitatis
nostrae nummo civitatis impressit characteres. . . .

Caelum transit, veri rotam solis vidit, ibi totam mentis figens aciem:
speculator spiritualis
quasi seraphin sub alis Dei vidit faciem.

Volat avis sine meta quo nec vates nec propheta evolavit altius:
tam implenda quam impleta nunquam vidit tot secreta purus homo purius.

Metre : four-line stanzas of accentual iambic dimeters, rhyming aaaa.

1 There is no doubt about the order of the first two words, in spite of the fact that the hymn is always quoted as the Jesu, dulcis. . . . 5 suavius, a quadrisyllable, cf. ll. 42, 126. 19 tenere, adverb, to be taken with diligere in the next line. In many of the inferior MSS. the word was misunderstood, and believed to be an infinitive with a false quantity, so that novit tenere was changed into potest credere. 38 The second mane is a substantive, 'morning': this was misunderstood, so that in the inferior MSS. the line is altered into et nos illustra lumine. 102 The change of accent in cûpivi was unfamiliar, so that in several MSS., and those not the worst, the line was changed into quod concupivi teneo.

63, p. 117. This song was printed from a twelfth-century MS. at Zurich by Jakob Werner, Beiträge zur Kunde der lat. Lit. des Mittelalters, Aarau, 1905, p. 62. The metre, like many of the poems of the Carmina Burana, is irregular, but not difficult to trace: most of the poem is in various trochaic measures, except ll. 9-14 which are dactylic and ll. 28-32, 35-39 which are iambic. The text is imperfect. In l. 27 I have supplied Terea after Philomena, but two lines are apparently lacking after marginē (l. 37), and it is awkward to have to make gramineo agree with marginē, with the words sub arbore frondosa intervening. I have hazarded in the text a supplement which at least meets the requirements of metre and rhyme.

64, p. 118. Of uncertain authorship: it has been variously ascribed to St. Anselm, St. Bernard, Hildebert, and Bernardus Morlanensis, the author of no. 54, and this is the most probable attribution: it is of the twelfth century, and other attributions (e. g. St. Thomas Aquinas, St. Casimir¹ of Poland) are quite impossible. It is part of a *Mariale*¹ or cycle of hymns in honour of the Blessed Virgin, though part of it (e. g. the stanzas beginning Ut jucundas cervus undas | aestuans desiderat are remote from that subject as well. Text in Dreves, Anal. Hymn. 1, p. 427. Metre: as no. 50, but four-line instead of six-line stanzas, rhymes aabccb.

31 A better rhyme than appears at first sight, for the g in dignos and m in hymnos were hardly sounded. 39 A poor rhyme, but I cannot suggest an emendation.

65, p. 121. The late Sir John Sandys called Hildebert, archbishop of Tours, 'the best of the medieval Latin poets'. This is high praise—perhaps too high—but the following lines are certainly among the most ingenious. The poem De excidio Trojae, published by Leyser in his Historia poetarum medii aevi (Halaë Magdeb. 1741) from a Leipzig MS. (and again by du Méril, Poésies populaires latines antérieures au douzième siècle, Paris, 1843), begins in ordinary quantitative elegiacs, which afterwards become rhymed on an elaborate system, the same rhyme occurring four times in each couplet: these are therefore leonine elegiac couplets both caudati and cristati. The poem is much too long to present in its entirety, but this is a fair specimen of the rhymed portion of it.

1 clāra is a sad false quantity to occur in the first line! Hildebert's prosody is usually very sound. 98 domui, the household of Aeneas. 105 Although the Sibyl spoke truth, her inspiration was not from God: but cf. no. 82, l. 3. 110 The apostrophe reverts to Aeneas.

66, p. 123. For the author see Miss Waddell's Wandering Scholars, ch. vii. This text mostly follows Manitius,

Gedichte des Primas, p. 24.¹ A cento from the latter part of this poem, beginning with ll. 36–44, has long been in use as a drinking-song, and is the best-known piece of mediæval Latin verse (secular) in existence. Translation in J. A. Symonds's Wine, Women, and Song, xiii. 5. Metre: Goliardic.

67, p. 126. English, and probably composed within twenty years of St. Thomas's death. The whole Office is too long to print, and I have therefore omitted Vespers, part of the second and third nocturns of Mattins, and Lauds. Text in Dreves, Anal. Hymn. xiii, p. 238. Metre: ll. 1–12, 53–64, Goliardic (see no. 52); ll. 13–52, 65–72, alternate lines of trochaic and dactylic dipodies, the latter rhyming in fives (twice) and once (ll. 65–72) in fours. All accentual.

68, p. 129. Of the life of the Englishman Geoffrey de Vinsauf (*de Vino Salvo*²) scarcely anything is known but that he was an adherent of Richard I, that he enjoyed the favour of Pope Innocent III, and that he was still alive in 1204. His Art of Poetry was esteemed in the middle ages scarcely less than that of Horace: and he inserts in it poems on different subjects as specimens of composition in various styles. The following extract is an example of the praegnans descriptio verbis in which, he advises,

69, p. 131. From a twelfth-century manuscript in the library of Saint-Omer, published by du Méril, Poésies populaires latines du moyen âge, 1847, p. 222. Metre: eight-line stanzas of accentual trochaic dimeters catalectic, rhyming abababcc: cc the refrain.

25 sqq. The last stanza is a little difficult, owing to a slight change in the argument. The first three have treated of the contrast between the physical cold without and the fire of love within; the lover now complains that whatever the seasonal temperature, he is a creature of sighs and groans.

70, p. 132. A Rhythmus de nativitate domini from the Hortus Deliciarum of Herrade of Landsperg, Abbess of Hohenburg in Alsace: a manuscript (now, alas, destroyed) of the second half of the twelfth century, compiled from various sources and illuminated by her for the use of her nuns. It is also found in other MSS. of the late twelfth and thirteenth centuries: text in the works of Engelhardt (1818) and Ch. Schmidt (1879) on Herrade, and in Dreves, Anal. Hymn. xx, p. 59. Metre: five-line stanzas of accentual trochaic dimeters catalectic, rhyming aaaaa; all the rhymes are monosyllabic, with the exception of the exotic words in the first stanza.

¹ I have just seen W. B. Sedgwick's Notes on Faral (Speculum, II, p. 331), with whom I agree here; but not in the suggestion on l. 593, which he believes to refer rather to the breast than to the waist.

16 I fear that I cannot quite accept the difficilior lectio of a good MS! 'Natus est ex virgo nux'! 27
A good MS. has dominum for Deum; it is possible, but there is no other instance of elision in the poem.

71, p. 133. The Welshman Giraldus de Barri, or Giraldus Cambrensis, as he is more often called in this country, lived about 1145-1220; this is clearly a poem of his youth, and may therefore be placed before 1200. He was elected bishop of St. David's, but was never consecrated, owing to successful opposition at Rome by the archbishop of Canterbury: see his life in the Dictionary of National Biography, and Brewer's preface to the edition of his works in the Rolls series (1861), from which—vol. i, p. 252—this text is taken. The preceding Descriptio cujusdam puellae is also attractive, but a little too anatomical for modern taste. Metre: quantitative elegiacs, on the classical model.

72, p. 135. Thirteenth century or earlier: probably of French origin, rather of the school of Adam of St. Victor, but soon found in Germany, and an especial favourite in England, where it found its way, in the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries, into the Sarum, York, and Hereford Missals, and many other service-books. It was early parodied in a well-known drinking-song, Vinum bonum et suave. Text in Blume and Bannister, Anal. Hymn. liv, p. 343. Metre: eight-line stanzas, like no. 60, but three, instead of two, acatalectic lines twice in each stanza; rhyming aaabcccb.

24 The last word of this hymn is gaudia in most MSS., but nomina is to be preferred both for the rhyme and as the difficilior lectio.

73, p. 136. Perhaps early thirteenth century: found in a manuscript fragment in the Bodleian Library which may have come from a sequentiary, with music, compiled for the Abbey of Bury St. Edmunds. It may be regarded as intermediate between the sequences of Notker Balbulus and the secular spring poems of the Carmina Burana. Text from the Bodleian Quarterly Record, vol. v (1926), p. 22. Metre: cf. nos. 38, 39; a combination of dactylic and trochaic rhythms; with correspondences.

11 The final word is accompanied by a long cantilena.

74, p. 136. The sequence is certainly of the early thirteenth century, but its authorship is not quite certain. The ascriptions to King Robert II of France and Hermanus Contractus are certainly wrong: Pope Innocent III is a possibility, but the most probable author is Cardinal Stephen Langton, archbishop of Canterbury. It did not early find its way into English (or any other) service-books, but is one of the only five sequences now left in the Roman Missal. English Hymnal 155, Hymns A. & M. 156. Text in Blume and Bannister, Anal. Hymn. liv, p. 153. Metre: six-line stanzas of accentual trochaic dimeters catalectic, rhyming aabccb; the b rhyme is on the syllable -um throughout the poem.

75, p. 137. The hymns and sacred poems of Philippe de Grève, chancellor of the University of Paris, were little known in England until lately: there is nothing by him in Hymns A. & M. and his name does not occur in Julian's Dictionary of Hymnology. Two of his hymns, both for St. Mary Magdalene, appear in the English Hymnal (230, 231), and a selection of his best in Phillimore's Hundred Best Latin Hymns. The text of this—rather a pious meditation than a hymn—is from Dreves, Anal. Hymn. xxi, p. 110. Metre: eight-line stanzas of accentual dactylic dimeters, rhyming abababab.

76, p. 139. Probably early thirteenth century: this is but a few stanzas from a long poem, describing Ganymede and Helen entering the courts of heaven, whither they are going in order to have a controversy decided by the assembled gods. The text was published by W. Wattenbach in Zeitschrift für Deutsches Alterthum, vol.

xviii (1875), p. 124; I have also used a manuscript (no. 385¹) in the Library of Gonville and Caius College, Cambridge. Metre: Goliardic, like no. 52.

76 Because his beauty was of so feminine a type.

77, p. 141. Early or middle twelfth century: the text was printed by Wright and Halliwell in Reliquiae Antiquae (p. 104) from the British Museum Egerton 613. Metre:

41 This stanza is a little difficult; the saint converts to Christianity a great number of people who were wise only in secular knowledge. 65 mira . . . gratia, ablative.

78, p. 143. English Hymnal 326, Hymns A. & M. 309. This and the two next hymns represent more than half of the poetical work of St. Thomas Aquinas. The first line of this hymn is taken from no. 17. Metre: the same in principle as its model, but accentual, and the rhyme at the half-line makes it not a three-line stanza of trochaic tetrameters catalectic, but rather a six-line stanza of trochaic dimeters, alternately acatalectic and catalectic, rhyming ababab.

79, p. 144. English Hymnal 330, Hymns A. & M. 311. The first line taken from no. 19. Metre: accentual iambic dimeters in four-line stanzas, rhyming abab.

80, p. 145. English Hymnal 317, Hymns A. & M. 318 (last two stanzas). In this grand sequence it may be seen how St. Thomas followed Adam of St. Victor and improved upon him. Metre: stanzas 1-9 like the early stanzas of no. 60; stanzas 10-11 have six long lines to two short, stanza 12 eight long lines to two short. Note the slight irregularity of the prosody of ll. 16, 17, in which a certain dactylic substitution for the regular trochees seems to be allowed: ll. 22, 23 are catalectic instead of acatalectic.

81, p. 148. Carmina Burana, no. 162; but better edited, with supplement and variants, by Wilhelm Meyer from a MS. at Munich in Fragmenta Burana, 1901.¹ Translation (of stanzas 1 and 3) in Symonds, Wine, Women, and Song, xviii, no. 42. Metre: nine-line stanzas of two accentual trochaic dimeters acatalectic, followed by the same line catalectic, thrice, rhyming aabccbddb.

82, p. 149. The grandest of medieval Latin poems, probably but not quite certainly by the Franciscan Thomas of Celano, the friend and biographer of St. Francis, who died shortly after 1250: possibly originally an Advent hymn, but early taken into use as a sequence at masses for the dead, and for All Souls' Day. See note on no. 2: discussion of text, authorship, and translations in Julian, op. cit., s. v. Text in Blume and Bannister, Anal. Hymn. liv, p. 269. English Hymnal 351 (487), Hymns A. & M. 398. Metre: three-line stanzas of accentual trochaic dimeters acatalectic.

16 censebit is undoubtedly the original reading, though sedebit is found in all modern versions. 56 The last two lines can hardly be part of the original hymn, and there may be other dislocations towards the end.

83, p. 152. Also ascribed to Pope Innocent III (d. 1216), but the balance of probability is in favour of the

NOTES

Franciscan Jacopone da Todi. See discussion in Julian, op. cit., s. v. Text in Blume and Bannister, Anal. Hymn. liv, p. 312. English Hymnal 115, Hymns A. & M. 117. Metre: as nos. 60 and 80.

84, p. 154. I might almost have headed this lyric 'Si non caste, tamen caute', but the parallel with Catullus in the last stages of his passion for Lesbia, when she had become a notorious 'cocotte mondaine', was too tempting. Carmina Burana, no. 83: translation in Symonds, op. cit. xvii, no. 40. The metre is curiously elaborate. The poem is in three sections, connected by the rhyme on -oso at the end of each (ll. 17, 34, 51); each section consists of three cola, the first a combination of dactylic and trochaic rhythms, the third iambic: all accentual. On this system the scheme may be easily worked out.

85, p. 156. The lament of a betrayed maiden, when the consequences of her love can no longer be concealed. Carmina Burana, no. 88: text established by P. S. Allen in Modern Philology, vi (1909), p. 91, who argues that it is certainly of German origin. Translation in Symonds, op. cit. xvii, no. 41. Metre: trochaic dimeters catalectic; the first stanza consists of three of these, aaa, with the refrain Eja, qualia | sunt amoris gaudia! the other stanzas of six lines each rhyming aabccb.

86, p. 158. This and the two following poems are of the same type—verses for the end of the school term. I think that the first two at any rate may really be of an earlier date than that indicated by their order in this collection, but I thought it convenient to put them together. Pieces of this kind sometimes take the form of politely asking the schoolmaster for holidays in view of the approaching festival of Christmas; sometimes they are more like hymns, with incidental references to the holiday season; sometimes they are rude and satirical, almost obscene, like the De licentia puerorum circa Natale Domini of the Englishman John Garland (d. about 1260) printed in Anal. Hymn. i, p. 554. This, composed for another time of year, is from a MS. of the thirteenth or fourteenth century at Gonville and Caius College, Cambridge (418, 417—Dr. James's Catalogue, ii, p. 491), and is playful without being unpleasant: it describes the rustic pleasures of the summer holidays. Metre: trochaic tripodies, accentual, arranged in ten-line stanzas, rhyming ababaabaab.

NOTES

87, p. 160. A Principium magistrale of the first type of those mentioned in the note on no. 86: a copy of verses of this kind was doubtless regularly written just before the Christmas recess. This specimen is from a fourteenth-century MS. in the Schlossbibliothek at Herdringen in Westphalia, published by A. Bömer in the Zeitschrift für Deutsches Alterthum, xlix (1908), p. 193. Metre as no. 82.

88, p. 162. From a fourteenth-century MS. now at Vienna, which formerly belonged to the Cistercian monastery at Camp in the diocese of Cologne, on the lower Rhine. Published by Dreves, Anal. Hymn. ii, p. 122. Metre as no. 59: but I have printed the 'Goliardic' lines in two separate halves because of the internal rhyme. The hexameters (pentameters at the end of the fourth and sixth stanzas) are from well-known medieval poems.

89, p. 165. Published by E. du Méril (Poésies populaires latines du moyen âge), 1847, p. 235, from a thirteenth-century MS. at the Bibliothèque Nationale at Paris. Metre: six-line stanzas, of which the first three and the fifth are iambic dimeters acatalectic, the fourth and sixth iambic monometers: all accentual: rhyming ababab.

90, p. 166. From the same MS. as no. 89, printed by du Méril, op. cit., p. 237: and Carmina Burana no. 167. A tripping dactylic metre (accentual): in each stanza ll. 1-4, 9, 11 are dactylic tetrameters dicatalectic, ll. 5-8 are really single dactylic octometer dicatalectic (though they are printed in sections to show the rhymes), while 10 consists of three dactylic monometers dicatalectic: rhymes aaaabbbbaaaa.

91, p. 167. Origo Scaccabarozzi, arch-priest of Milan, was contemporary and friend of the Dominican Peter Martyr (1205-1252, canonized 1253). Text from Dreves, Anal. Hymn. xiv, p. 166. There are some ingenious turns in it, but the fervour of the earlier hymn-writers seems to me to be absent. Metre: four-line stanzas of accentual iambic dimeters, of which the second and fourth rhyme.

92, p. 168. I have not found it very easy to get a good specimen of late medieval Spanish hymnology: this is a lively poem, rapid in metre and rich in rhyme, by the Franciscan Fray Gil de Zamora, tutor of Sancho IV (who reigned 1284-1296), the son of Alfonso the Wise. Text in Dreves, Anal. Hymn. xvi, p. 62. Metre: seven-line stanzas, of which ll. 1, 3, 5, 6 are iambic dimeters acatalectic, 2, 4, 7 the same catalectic; ll. 1 and 3 rhyme, and so do 2, 4, 7; ll. 5 and 6 rhyme internally at the half-line.

93, p. 170. John Pecham, archbishop of Canterbury 1279-1292. The first stanza has sometimes been considered rather materialistic, but the whole is reflective and philosophical. Text from Dreves, Anal. Hymn. 1, p. 594.

94, p. 171. Text from Blume, Anal. Hymn. xxxi, p. 111. Metre: Goliardic, but as there is a rhyme at the half-line, I might equally have printed it like the first six lines of each stanza of no. 88.

16 Although the MSS. have finali termino, I cannot think that the system of rhyme would be thus broken, and I have printed finalis termini. I would construe it closely with vale: 'when He said to the world the farewell of the last stage of His life'.

95, p. 173. Purposely written in incorrect and ungrammatical Latin. It is of English origin (there is a variant 'Gloucester' for 'Leicester' in l. 3 in one of the MSS.). The whole poem is too long for reproduction: the story of it is that the Abbot and Prior are drinking on some feast-day, and the former suggests that the monks might share in their good cheer. The Prior rather churlishly objects, and a monk, who is a Canon, tells the Prior what he thinks of him. The rest is an altercation between the two of them, each saying that the other has risen from the gutter, but at the end they make friends and all drink each other's good health. It has several times been printed: best by Wilhelm Meyer in Gött. Nachrichten (Phil.-Hist. Klasse), 1908, p. 406. Metre: four-line stanzas of three trochaic dimeters acatalectic and one catalectic: the first three rhyme aaa, the short line ends with the letter a throughout the whole poem.

96, p. 176. Of Bohemian origin, perhaps fourteenth century. Printed from a MS. in the University Library at Prague by Dreves, Anal. Hymn. i, p. 56. The metre is elaborate: the hymn is in three rhythmically equivalent sections: each of these sections consists of three cola, of which the first two are

The third colon is a six-line stanza, of which ll. 1, 2, 4, 5 are trochaic dimeters catalectic, ll. 3 and 6 trochaic tripodies, rhyming aabaab. The scansion is accentual throughout.

97, p. 178. From MSS. of the fourteenth century: text from Blume, Anal. Hymn. xxxiii, p. 190. Translation by J. M. Neale, Collected Hymns, p. 69. It is ascribed in one of the MSS. to Wilhelm Nan, a priest at Leyden. Metre: Goliardic.

11 plebanus: the regular word for a parish priest, especially in Germanic countries.

98, p. 180. Probably French, early fourteenth century. Printed by Dreves, Anal. Hymn. ix, p. 257, from MSS. at Auxerre, Paris (St. Geneviève) and Senlis. Metre: an eleven-line stanza, of which ll. 1, 3, 8, 10 are spondaic dimeters or tetrapodies, the others tripodies, all accentual, rhyming ababcccdcdc.

99, p. 182. Printed from various fourteenth and fifteenth century MSS. by Blume, Anal. Hymn. xxxiii, p. 332. Metre: Goliardic.

100, p. 184. Printed from a MS. (of the fourteenth or fifteenth century) like that mentioned in the note on no. 88 by Dreves, Anal. Hymn. xv, p. 258. Metre: Goliardic.

101, p. 186. St. Eloy (588-659) was himself a goldsmith before becoming bishop of Noyon, and patron of the goldsmith's art. This hymn, which is probably of the fourteenth century, was printed by Dreves from various French breviaries in Anal. Hymn. xi, p. 115. Metre: four-line stanzas of accentual iambic dimeters acatalectic, rhyming abab.

102, p. 187. Probably English: printed by Dreves, Anal. Hymn. xi, p. 27, from the Processionarium of St. Osyth (a house of Austin Canons at Brightlingsea). The first line is that of a series of famous sequences and does not rhyme internally, like the rest, which are quantitative elegiacs, leonini cristati.

103, p. 188. English, perhaps late fourteenth century. Printed from Sarum, Dublin, and Aberdeen breviaries by Dreves, Anal. Hymn. xi, p. 48. Metre: accentual sapphics, each long line rhyming, internally, and the adoneus rhyming in each pair of stanzas. The whole effect is slightly barbaric, but the rhymes are ingenious.

7 See note on 64, l. 31.

104, p. 189. English, perhaps late fourteenth century. Printed from MSS. at Lincoln and London by Blume, Anal. Hymn. xxxiv, p. 114. Metre: a ten-line stanza of alternate trochaic and dactylic dipodies, accentual, (cf. no. 66, ll. 13-52, 65-72), rhyming ababcdedec.

105, p. 190. This meditation falls into two portions: ll. 1-81 have to do strictly with the mystery of the Nativity, the rest is a dialogue between Christ and the human soul. The whole is printed by Blume from an Italian MS. in Anal. Hymn. xxxi, p. 24, ll. 82-end, and from one written in England in Anal. Hymn. xxxiii, p. 181. I suspect it to be of English authorship. Metre: nine-line stanzas, of which ll. 1, 3, 5, 7, 8 are accentual iambic dimeters catalectic, ll. 2, 4, 6, 9 iambic tripodies, rhyming abababccb.

106, p. 195. Probably of South German origin, if we may judge by the provenance of the MSS. from which Dreves printed this hymn, Anal. Hymn. ix, p. 114. Metre: an arrangement of accentual trochaic tetrameters catalectic and acatalectic, varying slightly in each stanza. The scheme is easy to work out.

107, p. 196. For use at compline. Taken by Dr. Neale (Sequentiae ex missalibus, 1852, p. 35) from a printed Hymnary which he found at Wolfenbüttel; also found, according to Daniel, in the Breviary of Havelberg in Prussia. Metre: alphabetical four-line stanzas of accentual iambic dimeters, rhyming aabb.

108, p. 197. Printed by Dr. Neale, op. cit., p. 102, from the Mainz Missal. Rather rough, but with a remarkable system of rhyme. Metre: as no. 87, but the rhyme in the longer lines is internal, instead of between the couplets.

109, p. 199. Probably fifteenth century, though sometimes wrongly attributed to Adam of St. Victor: it was printed among Adam's poems by Léon Gautier in his first edition (though not in the second and third) and printed and translated by Wrangham, The liturgical poetry of Adam of St. Victor (1881), vol. iii, p. 118; also by Dreves, from MSS. at Marchiennes and Douai, in Anal. Hymn. x, p. 86. Metre: six-line stanzas, of which ll. 1, 2, 4, 5 are accentual trochaic monometers acatalectic, ll. 3, 6 dimeters catalectic, rhyming aabccb.

42 supplicantes: there is another reading exorantem: is it more in keeping with the rest of the poem that the Blessed Virgin should say to her Son 'Hear the prayers of the faithful' or 'Hear my prayer'?

110, p. 200. The classical renaissance, spreading from Italy to north-eastern Europe, induces strange stirrings in far-off Bohemia. This hymn was published by Dreves (Anal. Hymn. i, p. 71) from a sixteenth-century MS., and it may be ascribed to the latter part of the preceding century. Metre and rhyme are uncouth, but the use of the mechanism of Greek mythology in a hymn addressed to the Blessed Virgin is curious, and the nine Muses are ingeniously introduced. Metre: eight-line stanzas, of which ll. 1, 3, 5, 6, 7 are accentual trochaic tripodies, ll. 2, 4 dipodies, while l. 8 varies between the two—but the license of an extra syllable is found in all. Lines 2 and 4 always rhyme, as do ll. 6–8; there are other rhymes occasionally.

24 fiens: presumably 'the weeping mortal'. 38

ingemiam: I think the poet had ingeminationem in his mind. 45-8 are difficult: I do not follow Dreves's interpretation, who takes 'Diana' as a classical conceit for the Virgin, but would rather explain 'if Cicero's eloquence were here now, he would be hymning the B. V. M., not Diana.'

III, p. 203. A pious parody of no. 78: printed by Dreves (at second hand) from a Dominican Breviary in the communal library at Bordeaux (Anal. Hymn. xliii, p. 294). Metre as no. 78.

3, 27 The original apparently has et Aquini in both places, for which I have restored Aquinatis, which is found in the text of l. 35.
